WORDS FOR THE WORLD

Religion is the outer expression of the divine reality. Therefore it must be living, vitalized, moving and progressive. If it be without motion and non-progressive, it is without divine life. . . . This is a century of life and renewal. Sciences and arts, industry and invention have been reformed. Law and ethics have been reconstituted, reorganized. . . . Soon will the present-day order be rolled up, and a new one spread out in its stead.

Strange But True
By F. H. MacArthur

Will the continued explosion of H-bombs effect the earth's climate? It is possible and indeed probable. Back in 1784, Benjamin Franklin and other scientists attributed the extreme cold winter of that year to the quantities of volcanic dust in the air, and during the past century and a half the average temperature of the earth has been lowered by volcanic dust as much as 1 deg. F. according to records. Nearly every cold, cold year since the start of the 18th century can be chalked up to volcanic dust. Following the eruption of Asama (Japan) 1783 there was little or no summer over the greater part of Europe and Asia. Eleven months of the year saw frost in most European countries, and snow fell for eight of the twelve months in Asia and for seven months in the northern parts of North America.

This is not so amazing when we learn that the direct effect of volcanic dust on temperature is felt over the entire globe. If volcanic dust can affect the temperature of the entire earth what about the explosion of a number of hydrogen bombs, the latest and most terrible production of science?

The force of the march explosion is calculated at twice that of the first H-bomb and about 600 times that of the first atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan.

With more powerful H-bombs the danger area would be immeasurably increased and the fine ashes that fell on the Japanese fishermen inflicting in some cases severe burns, might very well be distributed over the entire earth with dire results to the inhabitants of this planet.

Let us try to visualize just what would happen in the event of another global war. These dreadful missiles would have to be carried and dropped by robot planes because no ordinary airplane would be able to get far enough away in time to avert disaster.

Again, these robots would have to fly at breathtaking speed and at such altitudes that the problem of intercepting them would be colossal.

Once the approach of an enemy bomber was spotted it would have to be decided quickly what areas were in for a direct attack and what steps were feasible to minimize the value of the targets offered.

How would the earth's cities stand up under a direct hydrogen bomb attack? Could their inhabitants be evacuated in time to avert

TO VISIT JAPAN
TOKYO (Reuters) — Britain's Labor party leader, Clement Attlee, and other members of the Labor delegation visiting Communist China next month have accepted an invitation of the Japanese socialist party to come to Japan afterwards, it was announced Tuesday.

But we are reminded and consoled by the news that this final war between nations will be interrupted by the return of Jesus in power and great glory. "So shall it be at last, in that bright morning, when the soul waketh, and life's shadows flee. Oh, in that glad hour, fairer than day dawning, shall rise the glorious thought, I am with thee."

A major disaster? or would they all perish from flying debris or be killed to death by radioactive dust?

A fleet of bombers might well wipe out all the principal cities of the world together with their inhabitants in the space of hours for not even the scientists themselves know fully the scope and implications of the H-bomb.

Plans are underway for the evacuation of large centers. The success of the scheme will be watched with interest by an anxious world, but if such an evacuation cannot be carried out in 90 minutes or less, then in the event of war, there would appear to be little hope of saving civilization, and the history of the world might be brought to an end in the battle of Armageddon.

The restless tumult which today is shaking the world, is only a feeble prelude to the horrors which would come to mankind should a third world war develop.

All that wisdom, genius, education, culture, civilization and philanthropy have accomplished might be swept away by this terrible hurricane of destruction. Worse still, the islands might disappear and the mountains break from their moorings and be scattered like chaff across the plains. What then would become of human governments? Man, with his inventions, his glory, and all his pomp and pride would be overthrown.

In the light of these terrible and startling possibilities will the nations continue to stock up on hydrogen bombs and other deadly weapons of war, or will they learn to live in peace?

If not, then they must look forward, before long, to fight the battle which might well close the history of warfare of man against man, of race against race, of nation against nation.

For, in connection with the battle of Armageddon we are told there will be a pouring out of the seventh, and final plague. "The seventh angel poured out his vial into the air, and there came a great voice out of the temple of Heaven, from the throne, saying, it is done. And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great that the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations
