Commission Has Blueprint For N.B. Woodlot Owners

FREDERICTON (CP) — A royal commission has recommended a temporary minimum price for pulpwood and offered a blueprint to make New Brunswick woodlot owners more efficient.

The report, by University of New Brunswick Professor L. R. Seheult, was made public today (Thursday). The one-man inquiry began nearly two years ago.

Releasing the report by Prof. L. R. Seheult, Premier Louis J. Robichaud said government officials and private individuals and organizations would be asked for their views.

The report's recommendations include one for legislation to establish a $12-a-cord minimum price for roadside pulpwood.

The minimum price will be overtaken when the demand now building up within the province becomes effective and woodlot owners have strengthened their position, the University of New Brunswick professor said.

The main function of government should be to create conditions favorable to the development of local initiative, local planning and local government.

CREDIT UNIONS SOUGHT

The report recommends creation of credit unions to do away with sacrifice selling of wood products or stumpage to get immediate cash.

Among government steps urged:

Reorganization of the forest extension service as a branch of the department of agriculture.

Steps to develop existing woodlot owners' associations and creation of new ones.

Action to train woodsworkers and potential woodlot owners in the knowledge and skills to make their work more effective.

PROGRAM OUTLINED

A program by the federal and provincial governments for rehabilitation of small privately owned forest properties to improve their productivity.

Creation of a farm forestry development board.

Appropriation of annual amounts for loans to consolidate or acquire forest properties.

The report says a strengthening demand in the world for wood products had been felt in New Brunswick, including construction of new pulp and paper mills which had led to better prices paid woodlot owners for their pulp.

"The prospects of a strong and expanding world market for forest products is the most heartening aspect of the present situation."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
3 NT

Opening lead—five of clubs.

Bridge would be a much easier game to play if, when a crucial point in the play was reached, some kind soul would come along and ring a bell to tell you to be careful.

The trouble is that most of these situations sneak up on you unawares, and when you then do something that at the moment seems to be a perfectly natural thing to do, all of a sudden, a trick or two later, you begin to wish you'd done something else.

I wouldn't want to condemn West to the hoosegow for the rest of his days for what he did in this hand—it was all so natural—but it just goes to show that in bridge you can't afford to relax.

The bidding and the opening lead were normal and so was declarer's play. South realized that nothing could be done unless he could bring in the heart suit.

So he took the ten of clubs with the jack, played the king of hearts, both defenders following low, and led a small heart. West played the queen and South let him win the trick—not from a sense of affection, of course, but because West was a good guy to have on lead.

West couldn't do anything really constructive at this point. South was looking at nine solid tricks, and that's what he wound up making.

The mistake West made was one that almost anyone else in his shoes might also have made. He should have dropped the queen of hearts on the king when South led it. Had he done this, it would have become impossible for South to make the contract.

The queen was of no earthly use to West once declarer had played the king. If South had the jack, the queen was just plain dead, while if East had the jack, the queen was too hot a card to hold on to.

Somebody shoulda rung a bell.

Citizens Aid British Police In Move To Halt Crime Wave

LONDON (Reuters)—A violent crime wave by armed thugs has led British civilians to join unarmed police in "having a go" at the criminals.

The crime wave, which last week featured the wounding of two policemen in the arrest of an escaped convict, broke out after the House of Commons approved a bill to abolish the death penalty for murder.

In the latest incident, a civilian Saturday joined police and hurled iron rails at a pistol-waving man who was being bombarded with nightsticks by unarmed police in suburban Croydon.

One of the batons hurled by about 20 police hit the man on the head. He dropped his gun and the police jumped on him. The gun, later identified as a starter pistol firing blanks, was fired four time at a police sergeant who advanced toward the man following the theft of a car at gunpoint.

JOIN PURSUIT

In the arrest of an escaped convict after a robbery last Wednesday, citizens joined police in pursuing the man. A motorist, out shopping, rammed the gunman's car. When the fugitive was cornered civilians pelted him with bottles, stones and billiard balls.

The civilian aid followed a plea by Assistant Police Commissioner Ranulph Bacon for public to "have a go" when they saw a gunman at work.

The advice to "have a go" has been condemned by safety experts, however, who described it as madness and suicide. Many of the gunmen are youngsters taking drugs and pep pills.

Until recently criminals were seldom armed in Britain, and police are still unarmed except in special circumstances.

The crime wave was seen as strengthening opposition to the move to abolish the death penalty, which since 1957 has remained only for such crimes as killing a policeman, killing during commission of a crime such as robbery, and second killings by previously convicted murderers.

Leaders Released In S. Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — South Viet Nam's young military chiefs met another U.S. demand Sunday by releasing a score of political leaders arrested in the Dec. 20 military purge of the civilian government.

Five of the prisoners were members of the High National Council that was dissolved in the purge.

The military leaders, saying they now are co-operating with Premier Tran Van Huong and Chief of State Phan Khac Suu, gave no indication they are about to restore the council.

LONDON (Reuters)—A 121-year-old Azerbaijani mother recently celebrated her third son's 100th birthday in the company of two other sons aged 104 and 102, the Soviet news agency Tass reported Sunday.

W. Germany May Ease Up On Nuclear Force Proposal

BONN (Reuters) — Observers Sunday said West Germany now appears ready to mark time indefinitely on plans for a NATO nuclear force, provided French President de Gaulle gives the go-ahead for moves toward European political unity.

Observers here expect West German Chancellor Erhard to go all out for a decision on the European issue when he goes to Paris for two days Jan. 19.

They said he will be able to argue for unity in exchange for West German agreement last month on Common Market grain prices, which Bonn claims were accepted at considerable cost to its treasury.

West German leaders, particularly since the Franco-German clash during the Paris NATO meeting in December, have been toning down their support for a NATO nuclear force.

Erhard is believed to have bowed—at least for the time being—to the high-level statements from Paris that West German participation in such a project would be contrary to the spirit of the Franco-German friendship treaty of 1963.

There is strong feeling here that Bonn would harm its own interests by allowing strained relations with Paris over the nuclear issue to continue.

But Erhard is thought certain to bring up again the idea of consultative status in planning the strategy of the French nuclear force, a subject on which he was reported rebuffed when he met the French president last July.
