LIBERAL ELECTION METHODS.

Mr. C. H. CABAN, the nominee of the Conservatives of Cumberland County, N. S., in the course of an excellent speech acknowledging the honor done him by the electors, reviewed the conduct of the New Liberals at some length. "There is one thing I have against the Liberal party," said he. "That is that while they have professed and made strong professions of purity in politics, nevertheless in a democratic country like this, where the will of the people should be represented in the government, where the people have a right to their ballot and to have a pure vote, certain members of the Liberal party have in the great province of Ontario put their knife into the very vitals of democracy by their modern methods of switching and stealing ballots. I know not but what there may be wrong-doing in the Liberal-Conservative party, but what I condemn the Liberal party for is that while such ill-doings were striking a blow at the very vital part of democracy, at its very life, by tampering with the ballot, the Liberal leaders, instead of punishing these men in its own party who participated in those vile frauds, have screened the culprits from the law and prevented investigation into their conduct."

AGRICULTURAL TEACHING.

(Montreal Gazette.)

In connection with the the interesting experiment of manual training in our elementary schools, initiated by Prof. Robertson through the generosity of Sir William Macdonald, it might be well to consider the possibility of attempting some such scheme of general agricultural training as has been established in France and tried on a smaller scale in England. It has long been felt by British educational experts that the whole system of elementary education is directed to preparing children and teachers for the complex and artificial life of the towns; but the difficulty has been to find any practical remedy which would tend to lessen the deplorable drain of the country population. At Boscombe and in the Wye Valley attempts have been made towards an education which would have more to do with the open air and country life. The children are encouraged to have little gardens of their own, to take long walks, and to interest themselves in plants and insects. Of course, this can only be done by a specially qualified teacher, and it has only been done in a few instances, where a man has worked out a little scheme of agricultural education voluntarily and on his own initiative. In France the teaching is more systematic. The teachers are regularly trained during their college course, so that when they take schools they will be prepared to give agricultural instruction. The system of agricultural training for teachers is thus set forth: First year students assist the gardener in his ordinary work; second year students perform certain experiments with chemical manures under the professor of science, are taught grafting by the professor of agriculture, and fruit and vegetable culture by the gardener; third year students are taught to analyse soils and manures, have further instruction in grafting and pruning, and are taken to visit farms, nurseries; and similar institutions. In addition to this, third year students each have a separate plot which they cultivate under the direction of the gardener, and which is divided into five squares for strawberries; potatoes, scorzoneria, cabbage and flowers. The students are said to take a keen interest in their gardening, and the scheme has been generally pronounced successful.

In the schools all the children receive agricultural instruction. Up to 1897 it was a kind of extra subject, but it is now part of the regular curriculum, and must be taken successfully before the pupil can receive the certificate of primary instruction, which entitles him to go to work. Two theoretical lessons are given each week, followed by the practical work in the garden, budding, grafting, pruning, planting, etc. All the trees and vines grafted by the pupils are their own property, and they take them to their homes. Once a month, from May to September, visits are paid to nurseries and farms, while a walk on holiday afternoon is made the occasion for collecting plants and insects, or for a lesson in land surveying. Each child has a collection of dried plants, which are studied from various points of view, and their beneficial or harmful properties explained. In the school museum, to which the children contribute, there are 150 varieties of insects, classified either according to their good qualities or according to the injury they do to (1) the vine, (2) cereals, (3) vegetables, (4) fruit trees, (5) forest trees, (6) forage plants, and (7) rose trees and flowers.

It is a question whether it is wise to take up time by imparting the elements of botany and entomology. The school is not the place to learn even the beginning of scientific agriculture. What should be arrived at is the arousing of interest in outdoor life, and the simplest agricultural operations. If a boy were interested in the growing of corn and the bees and the birds, he would be less likely to find country life dull and seek excitement in the distractions of the city, which are often foolish and sometimes worse.

A WORD WITH THE PATRIOT.

To the Editor of the Patriot.

SIR,—Permit a farmer and a former admirer of Sir Louis Davies to offer a few remarks on your editorial of August 27:

In regard to the benefits conferred, there is likely to be some difference of opinion.

You say we have a new winter steamer. We also had one when Sir Louis Davies was in opposition, and she did not require recommendations as to her ability.

As to the straightening of our railway may I ask how much it has lessened the rate?

Then you say a railway has been built to Bellast and Murray Harbor. Sir, this is an extraordinary statement. It is fully forty miles from Southport to Murray Harbor. Eleven miles of railway are being graded from Murch's Point to Village Green. Call that a substantial benefit if you like.

You say the wants of the province are being attended to in a speedy and judicious manner. How is it then that a great portion of the money voted at the last session was merely a revote?

Now, Mr. Editor, I would have the farmers of this province take the list of civil servants and compare the salaries of these with the incomes they and their families are able to derive from their farms. And I would also have them remember that Sir Louis made a motion to this effect: "That owing to the prosperity of the times the civil servants have an increase of their statutory allowance." Has not Sir Louis relatives and immediate friends in the civil service?

I have no doubt the farmers in the Third District of Queen's will remember that Sir Louis had a special trip of the Stanley made in order that Mr. F. Peters might insult his supporters by taking his seat on the floor of the House for an hour and leaving them unrepresented for the rest of the time.

You speak of the proud position which Sir Louis occupies, and of the lustre shed upon this province by the honors of the Diamond Jubilee. Now the lustre which the farmers of this province desire most is the lustre of dollars and cents, that the purchasing power of a dollar may be greater than it has been. When we can obtain farm machinery, binder twine, cement, sugar, hardware and all necessaries of the same quality at a less price instead of at a greater it will be unnecessary for you, Mr. Editor, to occupy two columns of your valuable space in calling the people's attention to the benefits which they have received, for they will meet these every day.

I would like to refer to some other matters in this connection but do not want to occupy too much of your space.

A LIBERAL FARMER.

BABOO ENGLISH.

Examples of the quaint English written by Hindoo and other Indian clerks have, from time to time, found their way into the press, and the following letter is about as amusing as anything we have seen in print. We hardly supposed that the fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had spread so far among the not very pale inhabitants of the Indian Empire, but apparently their advertisements have penetrated sufficiently far to suggest to one enterprising native the desirability of entering the company's service. The judicious intimation that this gentleman's ailments only commence after business hours is especially amusing.

CALCUTTA, Nov 7th, 1899.

Honored Sir,—I can't help but to take it to your kind notice, that I am greatly suffering from a bad attack of fever to my system. Last fortnight I have been in a hospital, but I got no relief. Though somewhat cured, yet that's nothing. The doctors here told that I shall soon within six months get paralysis. I am now 19 years old, the case would be very severe to. Don't leave me hopeless, do try kindly. If I don't get any relief from it. It is sure no doubt, I shall commit suicide for I can't bear this horrible torture. By day I live alright, as an ordinary person. I do everything, but as night falls I get into my bed and keep whole night in agony. I have nobody in this world neither have I got a penny. If you would kindly take me to you, and keep me under your treatment, I shall be much benefited and so highly obliged to you for life as I can't speak out; you shall be the saviour of my life. I pray you kindly, kindly rescue me from this horrible pain. Do to me as you would do were you my father. Oh Lord, look over me to your wretched son, who is now going to die in agony. You are great and rich, we are wretched and poor; if you don't look over us like father and mother in this greatest danger, our case is fatal; we get nobody to say. Be kind enough and do stand by me and take me as father of my own. It is very simple thing for you. I promise you, I shall work in your office 8 or 9 hours a day, faithfully as I shall land there free of charge. Kindly excuse me for the trouble that you shall take for me. Have mercy on me as your own son. Save me, save me, please. Reply me very kindly and soon. I have the honor to be, your most affectionate and ever obedient.

CHINESE SITUATION.

Belief that Russia has Proposed Peace Negotiations.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Diplomatic circles in London appear to be satisfied that Russia has either directly sent circular notes to the powers proposing the opening of peace negotiations or has reached an agreement with the United States in regard to the basis on which the Government at Washington shall take initiative action, on the ground that the United States has no entanglements, like Manchuria, calculated to arouse the suspicions of the powers. Nothing definite, however, seems to be known at the legations in London except Russia's anxiety to end the prevailing conditions as speedily as possible, though the opinion is expressed that Russia believes that as a preliminary to the negotiations the allied forces should evacuate Peking and retire with their resident ministers, European and native Christians to Tien Tsin, whence they can better treat with the most responsible Chinamen available. It is pointed out that though some governments are inclined to recognize Li Hung Chang's powers, there is a feeling in some quarters that it would be more satisfactory to all concerned and would carry more weight with the Chinese themselves could some representative prince belonging to the reigning dynasty be found with whom to arrange terms. If, however, Li Hung Chang can secure any kind of credentials from the dowager empress it seems to be the opinion that his authority will not be too closely scrutinized except possibly by Germany, especially is Li Hung Chang can demonstrate that he has the support of the powerful southern viceroys.
