Gruchy - Stayner Wedding Is An Event Of Interest

A summer wedding of interest took place Saturday, July 5th, in Fort Massey United Church when Reverend D.M. Sinclair united in marriage Helen Elizabeth (Betty) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stayner Halifax, and David William, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Gruchy, Charlottetown.

Her veil of nylon illusion was gathered on a bonnet style cap trimmed also with Guipure lace. She wore white short kid gloves and carried a cascade of yellow roses around which was tied a white satin ribbon which had been tied around the wedding dress of her great-grandmother 103 years ago.

Their dresses, identically styled, were street length of white nylon organdy over white crystal charm, with yellow cummerbund and bow and matching picture hats. They wore white shoes and gloves and carried nosegays of yellow and white shasta daisies.

Best man was Peter Roach, Bermuda, and the ushers were John Hill, Donald Mutch, Cherry Valley, P. E. I. and Fred Mounce.

The bride's mother wore a street length pale blue panaglare dress with matching jacket, a navy picture hat, and matching shoes and purse. She wore white elbow length gloves and a corsage of white carnations.

The mother of the groom wore a dusty rose sheath style dress of chiffon over taffeta with harem drapery on the side. She wore a matching original hat with white shoes, gloves and purse and a corsage of white split carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Sword and Anchor Inn, South Park Street. The toast to the bride was proposd by T.I. MacDonald, Bedford.

For travelling the bride wore a blue print polished satin sheath style dress with a small blue linen jacket, matching hat, white glove shoes and purse and a corsage of white carnations.

Burhoe Family Reunion Held At East Falmouth

Mrs. D.F. Correllus of East Falmouth, Mass., writes a most interesting letter in regard to the annual picnic held each July 4th of the Burhoe Family of America Association.

"We had a beautiful day and we met in the Pine Grove adjacent to Mr. and Mrs. G. Putnam Burhoe's home in West Upton, Mass. The number of relatives and friends were not up to previous records but what we lacked in numbers, we made up in enjoyment.

The children played games while we held our business meeting. Afterwards a basket luncheon was enjoyed. Prayer was offered by Winslow Burhoe before the repast. The business meeting was opened by a prayer from Carrie Burhoe Putnam of Winchester, New Hampshire.

Our secretary's report was read and accepted, also, the treasurer's report was read and approved. Words of welcome were given by the president (Mrs. David Correllus), Wallace Burhoe, our patriarch (84 years old) of Wolfeboro, New Hampshire and also from Ezra Judson of New Bedford and Minnie Burhoe of Westboro.

Winslow Burhoe of Reading, Mass., read a paper he had written on Thomas Knight Burhoe entitled "Thoughts of Uncle Tom". As everyone knows Uncle Tom was loved by everyone. Winslow had truly caught all the facets of his life, his kindliness, love of all, respect for each one's rights. Many anecdotes were narrated about Thomas Knight Burhoe which were of great interest to all.

We read the article and showed the picture of Mrs. Henry Burhoe which appeared in the Charlottetown Guardian on her birthday. Many of the older folks said the picture looked just like her. They all wished to convey their best wishes to our matriarch. We were sorry to hear that she has been in poor health.

We sang one of Uncle Tom's favorite hymns "Work for the Night is Coming." Winslow had pictures of the family and also his father's home years ago.

The games were under the guidance of Mrs. Bert Harrington (Peggy), daughter of George W. Judson. They were on Prince Edward Island two years ago and met many people.

My husband, two youngest daughters and I are planning on leaving for Halifax, Nova Scotia, on July 26th. We are going to visit an uncle and aunt of mine—my father's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. George Farquhar. Uncle George some years ago was editor of the Halifax Chronicle.

He retired from the Board of Utilities about three years ago, which position he held since he was editor. They visited us last September. If time permits we might get to Prince Edward Island.

I should very much like to meet Mrs. Henry Burhoe, our matriarch, and aso the members of the family whom I could locate. We hope to have members of the Burhoe-Brehaut family of Prince Edward Island meet with us some time.

We try to set down births, marriages, deaths and interesting facts of the family group. Cards were sent to sick and shut-ins. The officers for another year are the same as this year. The secretary-treasurer is Doris Farquhar Correllus.

Our meeting closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

The day was sunny but not too hot and as we each journeyed our separate ways the sky clouded and before we reached Cape Cod (it's 100 miles from West Upton) it was rainy and foggy. July 9th has been the first clear day since the fourth so we felt very fortunte to have such wonderful weather for the reunion."

Mrs. Corellus' concludes her very fine letter by extending again an invitation to the Burhoe Reunion July 4, 1959.

France Sends Out A Short News Bulletin

"Avec les compliments du consultat de France a Halifax" is the greeting contained in the short news brochure sent out by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The brochure gives a general direction of cultural and technical affairs.

In the cultural news, arts and letters department, the following items are of spcial interest: The international "Charles-Veillon" prize for a novel in the French language, has been awarded at Lugano in Switzerland to the writer, Alfred Kern, author of the novel, "Le Clown."

The Grand Literary Prize of the City of Bordeaux, worth one hundred thousand francs, was awarded to the poet, Louis Emie, for his work as a whole.

The Eve-Delacroix prize for "a work combining literary qualities with an effort to exalt mankind," was awarded to Mr. Louis Leprince-Ringuet, a member of the Academy of Science and a professor at the Ecole Polytechnique, for his new book entitled, "Des Atomes et des Hommes." In this very topical book Louis Leprince-Ringuet studies the present situation of France in the field of Atomic energy, and examines very objectively the position of a Christian in the face of science.

The Albert-Londres prize which is awarded to a journalist for his overall reporting during the year, went to Max-Oliver Lacamp.

Another interesting item tells about an exhibition of the stones of France. Samples of all the stones of France used in architecture and sculpture are at present being shown at Place Saint-Gervais in Paris. This exhibition, which was organized by the stone masons guild "Tailleurs de pierre du Devoir" is intended for architects, artists and master masons. It shows all the possibilities of the various kinds of stone which are found in France.

"A French woman is the world's best shorthand typist is the caption for another item." An international stenography competition organized at the world exhibition was won by a French woman, Miss Viviane Viola, the French champion, who typed an average of 240 words a minute.

HOUSEHOLD HINT

Heat, oil, long immersion in water and pinching threaten the life of your rubber garden hose. Drain it thoroughly after each use, don't bend it sharply in storage, keep it in a cool place and don't step on or drive over it.

A small break, or worn place, in lingerie lace should be fixed promptly by machine - stitching back and forth over it.

A large broken place is best mended by basting a piece of net footing on the back, then machine - stitching over the area.

Nothing teaches more profoundly than example. Preaching neatness and cleanliness has no effect on your children if you yourself do not serve as a visible model.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Even Birdsong Was Sad After Tragic Accident

July brought a gray day this morning—one warm with summer and gently beclouded. A Sabbath stillness, it seemed lay along the fields and even the bindsong was sad.

And all over that countryside we knew in childhood, where we came this afternoon with James to a funeral, and indeed we believe over the whole county and afar, with his bereaved, folks mourned the loss of a boy whon they had much liked and respected and now in the church of that village lay dead. Presently he would be laid to rest in the old cemetery on a gently slope over-looking the river, there to sleep a last sleep.

His passing was sudden. It came in a tragic accident of the road. And untimely, as we who "see through a glass but darkly" may say. For he was much needed as are all young folks of our times for theirs is a future which stretches most invitingly before. What privileges are theirs, what opportunities, what blessings of the age! But they go. . .leave it all. A second only is the short bridge which joins life with Eternity's shore.

And they were so young and happy, those who in a twinkling are summoned thus away. Smiling, healthy, active, brimming with life, those whose shades we may easily fancy as we journey along the highways, and in odd instances, the by-ways of this small Island Province that is our pride.

And the grave closes over them in a mound of red clay and we are sad. And we say of this or that sudden and untimely passing or traffichurt, Island-wide, this will be the last. But it is a vain hope. There is no end. The sad toll goes on and on. And delightful as are our summer days, and beautiful as are our scenes, the grim ghastly spectre of Death continues from the vast travelling choosing from the vast travelling lines, this or that one of our loved ones and friends.

Sad this day. . .and every day, which removes in a tragic passing some beloved little lad of once, or little girl, and it seems that "there is no help" anywhere to make safer their paths.

A day this, as was yesterday, to have Granddaughter home again after a pleasant holiday with cousins—to have all the children down to wee Alex interested in some out of door pasttime. Gage and Mack as small fellows before them, built fetching vehicles, carts and wagons to which to hitch the shaggy pup, who when led off on some mission of hauling seemed to enjoy the play quite as well as they.

Alex felt the clay on the bare feet that pattered, with growing assurance, about. He falls but rises smiling to continued on his way. And seeing his enthusiasm we remembered that life is like that. It has its sorrows and discouragements, but overcome, its paths lead away at length quite brightly again.

And another day of the new week—one warm with summer and gently beclouded, follows now closely on yesterday's heels . . .goes out through the dimness. Until tomorrow — — — Diary Good-night.

MARY HAWORTH

Must Invade Their Fields

Dear Mary Haworth—Perhaps this isn't the type of letter that you are used to receiving, but I have a problem that many girls my age face. I am 24, and have a girl friend, 26, who is in much the same predicament.

Recently we broke up with our boy friends and now find that we have been out of circulation for so long that we don't know how to go about meeting young men.

We have discussed this with other girls and were shocked at their recommendation, namely—go to different bars and pick up men. Naturally we didn't respond to this suggestion. But as the weeks have gone by, with no men in our lives, we have begun to realize that this is actually about the only thing left to do!

We both belong to the YWCA—but the social program locally seems to cater to a younger crowd, younger than either of us.

We have been brought up to a better standard than to hang around bars, and we hope that you can offer other ideas, as to different clubs or activities that we might join, to bring us into association with nice people interested in having a good time.

E. B.

INVADE MALE FIELD

Dear E. B.—In order to meet men, you have to pur yourself in their path, without seeming to "look" for them. And the diplomatic way to go about this craftsmanship is to invade their fields of interest.

For example, you might study the subject of sound financial investments, and spend oddments of time, say at the lunch hour or on your afternoons or days off, in a brokerage house—or wherever the ticker tape gives the latest stock market reports. You might encounter sound young men there as members of the staff, or as minimal investors, like yourselves. What more natural than that you should have an exchange of views, about market news, and gradually arrive at friendship, maybe?

Or you might take up golfing, or fishing, or skeet shooting or archery—long enough, at least, to do research into the prospects of meeting men, as if by chance, in these pursuits. Another approach is to join a bowling league. Or a political action group dedicated to "party" support of local, state and national candidates who stand for the ideas you believe in.

CLASSIC APPROACH

Another conventional method of stalking men is by making vacation plans with purpose and care. You live rather far north — and Canada offers an interesting variety of all-weather playgrounds, where more men than women might be found.

I've been told that ocean cruises are mostly a waste of the lone woman's time, if she is searching for a beau. Too often the idle men on board are outnumbered in droves by the idle women—travelling in groups or pairs or singly. And you can't make much headway towards friendship, much less romance, if you are one of a female horde competing for the elbow of Mr. Smug—who can't help disdaining manless women en masse, all straining obviously to catch his eye.

Speaking of obvious effort, I suppose you belong to a church—or do you? If not, you've overlooked the classic Grade-A approach to happy marriage; and I assume that this is the goal you have in mind — and that meeting men is but a stepping stone.

Year after year, new research reveals that young people accustomed to attending church regularly, and supporting church activities, show a significantly high percentage of success in finding suitable marriage partners. By the same token, there is something pathetically off course and drifting, about the youngsters who have no church-centre in their lives, and who are reduced—I am sure that's the word for it—to hanging around bars, in forlorn hope of finding meaningful fellowship there.

My advice is to keep a firm hold on your shock reaction to the suggestion of frequenting bars, for pick-up purposes. Your sensibilities are still in a healthy state while you feel that way.
