You may be busy; so are we, and have been all the Spring. So busy that we did not have time to advertise and tell you all the fine things we have for this season and the low prices we are selling for, but the people find us out, for it takes over forty people to keep the orders we get made up, so it keeps us moving to keep everything going right. #### His Funeral.

The minister of a colored church in a Connecticut town gave out a funeral notice one Sunday which came near upsetting the gravity of a visiting clergyman who had come to preside over some ceremony in the mission church which was connected with his own society.

"I had to announce to you, brethren and sisters," said the pastor earnestly, "that the funeral of the only surviving son of the late William Johnson and his widow, Sarah Johnson (formerly Baker), both deceased, will take place and come to occurrence on Tuesday next at 12 m. noon precisely."

"And I had to say, brethren and sisters, that contributions for carrying out of that funeral will be in order and acceptations, or else de funeral cannot take place, excepting and save only as a plain burial, for Samuel Johnson has got 'jes' money enough to bury hisself without any obsequious ceremonies, such as he deserves."

The visiting clergyman was glad to learn that this remarkable appeal was not without effect, and that Samuel, "the only surviving son," did not lack proper "obsequious ceremonies."—Youth's Companion.

Costly Water Supply.

There is a man in England whose water supply is extraordinarily expensive. He is a millionaire, who lives near a village. Not liking the local water, he had a special conduit built for himself at a cost of $400,000, though he resides there only three months a year.

Events and History.

It would be absurd to deny that individuals are often subject to the decrees of chance and accident. While in the main the character of a man is determined by his inherited qualities, by his bent of mind, it is positive that his training, his surroundings, his occupation, have much influence over his career. The mere accident of turning up one street instead of another, or something no less trivial and accidental, has often decided the future of a person for good or for ill. When, however, we come to the great body of mankind, it is different. We are too much in the habit of regarding history as the product of great generals and of ignoring the conditions under which they have made war. The more intimate we become with the social history of other ages the more we are able to see that the issue of wars has been foreordained by the conditions of peoples, and the more we are able to see that in the main the course of events could hardly have been other than it was. The study of the laws of causation shows that the conditions that exist long after what have been called decisive battles have been fought might have been predicted with a reasonable degree of accuracy. Though Napoleon had not failed at Waterloo, if such a thing were possible, still virtually the social and economic and even political conditions that we find would have succeeded. It is these, at last, that determine wars and victories.

Manhood in the mass is not exempt from the processes of evolution that are at work throughout the universe. Whether the movement at any time be evolution or dissolution, it cannot be more than momentarily checked. Burke observes that when a great change is to be made in human affairs the minds of men fit themselves to it. The fact is that it is because men's minds are fitted to it that the change comes, the minds being shaped by a long series of causes. Because we are not always able to read the laws of causation is no proof that they do not operate. The great generals who make history are themselves but the creatures of ignorant causes and obey laws of which they are ignorant.—New York Commercial.

JEWELRY CONCEITS.

In London and Paris everything Etruscan is in vogue.

With the old fashioned stones recalled by jewelers is the moonstone. Our women are adopting the fashion set abroad of wearing gem set bracelets around the knot of hair.

Jeweled embroidery employs not only imitation jewels, but in some cases real brilliants are used.

It is rumored from foreign fashion centers that earrings of the old time type are coming back to us.

For the hair are many new rayed stars, and besides these there are high shaped combs and glittering aigrets.

Eminently ornamented are my lady's dress buttons, which may be of tortoise shell, amber, gold, Russian enamel or painted china in Louis XV and XVI styles.—Jewelers' Circular.

The Bell Organ & Piano Co., L'd.

Dear Sis,—Allow me to compliment you on the qualities of the Piano ordered from you for the Toronto Conservatory of Music. The tone is remarkably pure and brilliant throughout, while the bass is deep and powerful. The mechanism is apparently perfect, the touch elastic, and in appearance the entire Piano is a work of art.

Yours truly,
