Rifle Trophy Presented As Rotary Opens Air Cadet Week

A coloured film of thrilling interest shown by Jack Meredith A. F. M. Monday at the luncheon meeting of Rotary in the Charlottetown Hotel, marked the opening activity of Air Cadet Week locally, in keeping with the nationwide observance of the same.

The Air Cadet Story, pictured in full colour, the routine which develops a young lad into a competent citizen with a grasp of a great many vital interests, not necessarily pointing to a career job with the R.C.A.F. or one of the Commercial air organizations.

Twenty-two thousand Canadian high school boys starting at age fourteen attend weekly classes under the supervision of R.C.A.F. reserve officers. The Cadets are "Link Trained" in instrument flying, and are given an opportunity to ask questions of ground crews on all types of planes.

business. R.E. was a man of faith and courage, possessed of a keen analytical mind." Guests of Rotary were Ross McEbrin, Moncton, Percy Cameron, Bud Larrabee and James Currie, and P.L. Sinclair MacLeod, City.

TOP 40 The top 40 cadets taking the drill instructors course are on graduating, rounded into a competitive unit to compete with similar units from the United States. Six of the nine annual competitions have been won by the Canadian Air Cadets. Twenty-five thousand persons witnessed their manoeuvres at the Canadian National Exhibition last year.

Mr. Meredith, who had been introduced by the chairman, was thanked by the chairman, E.D. Reid. The film was particularly interesting in view of the fact that the Air Cadet Squadron in Charlottetown was sponsored by the Rotary Club during the war years 1941 to 1945.

RIFLE TROPHY A feature of the meeting was the presentation of the rifle shooting trophy to No. 60 Charlottetown Squadron, Royal Air Cadets and its acceptance by P.L. Sgt. Keir Costaine in the presence of Cpl. Edson Weir, who was captain of the winning team and also was presented with his wings as a pilot last year.

The Charlottetown rifle team won the shoot for three years of the ten of competition, thus winning the trophy outright.

P.C. Leader Visits Montague And Summerside During Tour

By ALAN DONNELLY Canadian Press Staff Writer

JOHN Diefenbaker toured this island province Monday, telling the story of how his Scots ancestors just missed settling here and expressing confidence for his Progressive Conservative party's chances in the June 10 election.

"There's a spirit today among our people that spells the hope of victory," he said at a morning meeting at Montague, centre of King's constituency on the east end of Prince Edward Island.

And for the benefit of this province which was largely settled by Scots, he recalled how his maternal ancestors, two Bannerman brothers from Sutherlandshire, "missed the boat" for Lord Selkirk's 1807 immigration group which came to P.E.I. five years later. The brothers came on Selkirk's second settlement expedition on a sled between Fort Churchill and York Factory in the winter of 1812-13," he said.

The Progressive Conservative leader motored 30 miles to Montague, where he chatted on the sidewalk with about 25 men. Much of the population was absent, preparing for Wednesday's opening of the lobster fishing season.

He spoke to another 50 in a restaurant gathering, then motored back to Charlottetown and flew to Summerside, main centre of Prince constituency on the east end of the island.

He was to speak Monday night at Charlottetown, in Queen's riding which returns two Commons members. The only P.E.I. Conservative victory in the last election was in one of the two Queen's seats.

At Montague, where the Conservative candidate carries the famous political name of John A. Macdonald, Mr. Diefenbaker ran into an RCMP corporal, Don Wannamaker, whom he recognized from his Prince Albert, Sask., constituency. Cpl. Wannamaker was stationed before 1955 at Punichy, Sask.

He also met a hale and hearty 98-year-old resident, Philip Murphy, who said he has voted Conservative at every election for 75 years.

"I saw Sir John A. Macdonald, Tupper and all that crowd," he told Mr. Diefenbaker. "I saw them all."

"That's wonderful," Mr. Diefenbaker replied. While the party leader chatted on the sidewalk, Mrs. Diefenbaker stepped across the road to meet some women in a general store.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the meeting that a government 22 years in office like the Liberals should be changed. "A political party that cannot mobilize the hearts and aspirations of young men and women cannot live."

PENSIONERS HARD HIT He said it was a story of "up goes the cost of living and down goes the purchasing power of the dollar and in this connection noted that the hardest hit was the old age pensioner, the recipient of veteran's allowances and civil servant pensioners. "Why have the war veterans been treated so shabbily and subjected to a means test for those who receive the W.V.A.?" he asked.

Mr. Diefenbaker stated that the coming contest was no ordinary election. He said all power corrupts and the present Government at Ottawa had acquired a power complex. "When public discussion ends, freedom ends and it is the abiding of this freedom that has stirred the hearts and emotions of our people throughout the ages," he added.
