

The "Organized Hypocrisy" in the Trade Question.

THE "Organized Hypocrisy" are ever true to their instincts. Their cooked, tortuous and utterly contemptible course is becoming more clearly marked every day.

"In this Province, where the Grits find that protection is making headway, not a few of the organs of that party declare that they are not in favor of free trade, but of a revenue tariff in Prince Edward Island and the Maritime Provinces generally, where free trade ideas are in the ascendant, the best efforts of the Grit journals are given to the task of proclaiming and proving that their leaders are free traders.

Sir John McDonald hits off the "policy" (save the mark) to the life when, commenting upon the return of the Government to the Protective principle respecting malt, after the step they made last session in the direction of Free Trade, he said:—

These gentlemen were just as strong Free Traders last session as they are this session. At the command of the hon. the Minister of Finance, last session, these Free Traders rushed zealously to the front in their charge, and increased the duty to 2 1/2 cents on malt.

Last session they marched up—now they march down! We are told of all the horrors of a retaliatory policy, if we carry out a National policy; we would, actually, have a duty of 40 per cent. put upon our wheat and flour.

A Halifax paper says: It is plain that the destinies of the country just now are in the hands of half and half Protectionists. There are enough of them to turn the scale and to secure the passage of Sir John's resolution. It is plain that they are not to be classed as Free Traders, because your out-and-out Free Trader objects to all protection, and in theory, abolish all Customs' duties, and resort—as Mr. Cartwright has affirmed he would like to do—to direct taxation as the proper and only legitimate way of raising a revenue.

An Iowa legislator summed up the principles of his party very neatly in a cautious meeting the other day: "I am on the make; you are on the make; we are all on the make." Apply this to the original members of the McKenzie Cabinet:—

we ourselves voted for last year is not removed." Hon. gentlemen opposite have been charging us with turning right-about-face. The country will determine who have made their retreat, and who have shown the least interesting portions of their persons to the public.

Mr. Dymond: May I ask the right hon. gentlemen whether a retaliatory tariff, as against the United States, would mean the abolition of duties or the imposition of duties on agricultural products.

Sir John A. McDonald: I do not see that is particularly relevant to my line of argument. If the hon. member will do me the honour to read my resolution which he voted against, he will find that the resolution says that, until we obtain reciprocity of trade, our true policy is to make an advance towards reciprocity of tariffs, so far as the varied interests of Canada will permit.

A Fraudulent Election.

It is now certain that Hayes has no right to the Presidential Chair. By the confessions of disaffected Republicans it is made evident that his election was a fraud. The Republicans of the United States are characterized by the same kind of frauds as the Grits of the Dominion. The two parties are as much alike as two brothers. The Grits are not quite so old, and therefore have not reached such a height of infamy. Happily both are tottering to their fall.

Political Meeting.

Hon. J. C. POPE will address his constituents in the Market Hall on Friday evening. We have no doubt that he will be pleased to see present a good representation of his friends from all parts of the country.

Political Notes.

Mr. Blake thinks compulsory voting necessary for the electors, but how about hon. members who flee the House as the bell rings for a division?

The new block of offices at Ottawa has cost $280,000. And this cost has been incurred to accommodate the increased number of officials under a Government which boasted of its economies! Long live "Reform!"—Hx. Herald.

The London Herald asks the people to judge Mr. McKenzie and his colleagues by "their inability to form a policy, their want of impartiality in dispensing the patronage of the Crown especially in giving contracts, their corruption in matters political, and their universal extravagance in handling the people's money."

Sir John in an impassioned speech, recently delivered, expressed his scorn for Ministers who after promising to restore the golden age of purity, could only reply to attacks by crying "You're another." He accepted and applied to Grits McKenzie's saying that he who advocated in Opposition what he did not carry out when in power, was a demagogue.

Now again we have McKay, of Cape Breton [an out and out Grit], proposing to put a protective duty on coal, after having, by his vote, condemned the principle of protection as an out-and-out robbery of the people. In one breath he shouted, "All protective duties are a robbery"; in the next he shouts with equal force, "A protective duty on coal is good."—Hx. Reporter.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. Mr. Christie $4,000; M. Dorion 7,000; M. Fournier 7,000; M. Cauchon 10,000; Mr. Laird 8,000; M. de St. Just 10,000; Mr. Macdonald 10,000; Mr. Ross 4,000. Total $60,000.

And it fits them to a T.—Mail.

This is what the Mail says of Mr. N. L. McKay's motion on coal:— Another day has been wasted in a debate over a buncombe motion proposed by Mr. McKay, of Cape Breton, in amendment to the motion to go into Committee of Supply. Mr. McKay has all at once taken coal under his special charge and protection, and, seemingly with a view to getting as small a vote as possible for his motion, proposed to levy an import duty on coal of 75 cents per ton—25 cents more than has been asked by the coal owners themselves. The whole thing was a dodge—a small political dodge, with a view to the possible embarrassment of some members on the Opposition benches.

Mr. McKenzie's patent process for making this a cheap country to live in is wonderfully successful:—

Table with 3 columns: Year, Failures, Liabilities. 1874: 966, $7,896,000; 1875: 1,968, 28,843,000; 1876: 1,728, 25,517,000; 1877: 1,890, 53,510,000. To March, 1878: 6,552, $87,566,000; 555, 9,103,000. Total: 7,107, $96,669,000.

Here 7,000 happy souls making twenty cents do the work of a dollar. Happy land!—Mail.

There seems every reason to believe (says the Quebec Constitution) that Hon. M. De-Boucherville will be released by Lord Dufferin from the obligation of his official oath, by which he is prevented from making rejoinder to the Lieutenant Governor's explanations. If he is permitted to speak, we can promise our rogue friends that the worst that ever has been said by the Press in denunciation of his conduct is not a circumstance to what will be disclosed. It will be a record of shameless duplicity and craftiness, meddlesome officiousness and gubernatorial pettifoggery, such as never was heard of in the worst days of the Spanish Bourbons. We hope it will all come out before the polling day. Mr. Joly will have still more "light" thrown upon the constitutional question.

One of our liveliest exchanges remarks: The course pursued by individual members of the Reform Party in the matter of protection to the industries of the country is simply contemptible. They vote against the resolutions of Sir John, which deal comprehensively with the whole question. They declare themselves utterly opposed to the principle of protection, by their vote, and then when they have aided in preventing anything like a judicious plan, general in its application, they start all sorts of resolutions affirming the propriety of placing a protective duty on this, that and the other individual article. One Grit moved, and another seconded, a resolution providing for a duty on American grains of certain kinds. These two worthies had just previously affirmed that all protective duties were a legalized robbery. By their resolution they affirmed that protective duties on some things were good.

The Montreal Star, on the Goff-Baker scandal, says:—"We would not go so far as to say that Goff has entered into a compact with the Liberal Party to empty his buckets of mud on to the Conservatives for a consideration, and for political effect; but there is abundant evidence that he has fallen into the hands of the engineer of the political machine, that he is doing a dirty and dishonorable service, and that he is being backed up and shielded by the whole power of the Liberal Party in this Province. He was a skulking outlaw from justice for weeks, and could find no one to go bail for his appearance in Court when called upon. Last week, however, he appears to have succeeded in effecting a new combination of friendships and relations, and the way for his return was clear. The results of this were speedily developed. Goff made his appearance at the very headquarters of the political machine from which he culminated his attack upon the ex-Solicitor General; he was arrested there on a warrant, charging him with forgery in connection with the Canada Agricultural Insurance Company; he political machine found him his bondsman, also his lawyer, and will no doubt see him through. Now all these things may be capable of another explanation, but on their face they imply that a bargain has been made by Goff with his new-found political friends. Until we can see reason for believing otherwise, we shall be of opinion that there is no real foundation for the charges against Baker, and that they have been made against him solely for the purpose of damaging his election and throwing discredit upon the party with which he acts. The Liberal Party in this Province long ago nailed upon its standard the motto, 'We go in to win at any cost.'"
