ELLEN'S DIARY

Mack Thinks Sister's Chore Is Nothing Compared To His

"The oak's leaves have fallen, and the lilacs' Mack came by to tell us this morning. 'Winter's coming' he nodded with a smile. 'You know there's something nice about the first snowfall, I can't explain what it is, but I do like to see the first flakes drift, like white feathers, down.'"

"Winter is only about a month away on the calendar" we said. "And would you believe it? So is Christmas!" he added.

He had been filing the woodbox at the house across the lane, carrying the sticks from the woodshed to it in the small wheelbarrow which in its handiness to the women and children is similar to the use of the little truck to the men.

Cord after cord of wood it has drawn to the houses. And how could we garden without it? And besides, it has been a preferred vehicle for the succession of youngsters who have caught delightful rides in it about the lanes.

Mack goes early to his chore. That which is supposed to balance it in labor comes to Granddaughter later, when her task is to clear the breakfast table and wash and set the dishes away.

"That arrangement" Mack offered today "doesn't seem exactly fair in my mind. She is older, but she gets the easier chore! When you come to consider it, what's washing a few dishes, with water and all right to your hand, to filling a woodbox with sticks? Nothing at all" he nodded.

"Well of course" you could exchange words."

"Don't think I can't wash—or spread a table or cook a meal" he grinned. "It's the fairness of the thing—the evenness I'm thinking of."

Sometimes nice incidentals to his choring appear. As yesterday morning when we saw him drop the handles of the barrow and gaze intently off over the fields. And smile. "Do you see what I'm seeing?" he called. "A fox over there—after mice, I guess. A black one—see his white tip? And isn't he bold! I thought at first it was a stray hound, I'm going to get that fellow" he promised himself. "Just give me a nice snowfall to catch the whereabouts of his trails."

School catches the lad. And quite willingly. And so with lessons and chores and the exciting sights and happenings that go with the farming his days are satisfyingly busy and full.

Brittle the sunlight was today, but drying, warming the farm-lands. The millstream was decked out in lovely jewels. There was a happy lift to the sparrows' wings and the wind touched lightly the bare boughs and the brown leaves along the yards.

And all the time November was bringing field and meadow near and nearer to their quiet winter rest.

—Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

Kensington Church Is Setting For Pretty October Wedding

The church of the Holy Family, Kensington, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, October 24, when the Rev. Louis Callaghan united in marriage Mary Donna Mill, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mill, Saint John, N.B., and Peter Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Murphy of Norboro, P.E.I., in a double ring ceremony.

The bride who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Allison McInnis, was gowned in white net over taffeta in ballerina length, with a V neckline, and a bolero with long sleeves coming to a point over the wrist. Her finger tip veil was of bridal illusion, and she carried a white prayer book with a bouquet of red sweetheart roses.

Miss Gloria Murphy, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, wearing a ballerina length dress of yellow lace over net, a crownless picture hat and mitts to match. She carried a nosegay of white mums.

Mr. Francis Croken, friend of the groom, was best man. Miss Etta McDonald played the wedding music and accompanied a girls' choir.

Mrs. Mill, chose a dress of Dior blue with picture hat to match, for her daughter's wedding. Her corsage was of pink carnations. Mrs. Murphy, mother of the groom, was gowned in red velvet with white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. John McInnis grandmother of the bride, wore a dress of royal blue and black with black and white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Birch Hill Lodge where the table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mr. Martin Murphy, friend of the groom, acted as master of ceremonies and extended best wishes to the bride and groom.

For a honeymoon trip through the Maritimes, the bride donned a red wool two-piece dress with white accessories and a corsage of red and white carnations.
