CREASE RESISTANT

Trend of Montreal captures an original Oleg Cassini design in six ounces of pure silk, hand-printed Georgette. The dress, identical to the designer's original, carries the Union Label, symbolizing it was made by skilled Canadian craftsmen. Styled with body-conscious lines, the dress folds kerchief small for travelling, yet unpacks smooth and creaseless for the bewitching hour. Previewed in the National Collection.

ELLEN'S DIARY

House Lights Twinkle Like Jewels On White Gown

"We miss the moonlight," James commented, when he stepped out of doors this evening to go to his chores. "Not that, with the lights in the barns, it makes any difference at the work, but to my mind, there is something satisfying about a moonlit March night."

"We'll have the new moon shortly," we said.

"I wonder if, as they say, 'The last quarter will rule the first?' " He smiled. "We'll hope so, for this weather is good."

Dusk was falling then. Already the low of the valley and the hilltops were dim, over which the purpling shadows continued to drift. Lights were commencing to twinkle from the houses near and far, like we fancied bright jewels on a fine white gown. Away in the distance, northward against the deepening night, a brighter one moved, and another. Cars! Yes, folks homing on this and that road - what a pleasant thought! - returning back to the best spot of earth: to its shelter, and peace, and 'oving sympathy at the close of their day.

And now our stables - windows were alight. From an open door, a brightness beamed across the snow. And also - we smiled to hear them: the spring-time sounds.

If you live on a farm, you catch them these days: mornings, evenings, the returning voices of the season. Perhaps this is declared most of all in the increased crow - call. And no matter where, high or low, we may put this dark creature on our list of feathered folks, the fact remains that we welcome eagerly his voice among those March brings. It comes into our awareness, it may be on a bleak morning, and hearing, thoughts turn back through the years and we recall that this was ever the prelude to the swelling and delightful spring-song.

Sounds from the stables, the new season gives: the call of an anxious mother, the answering low of a calf. . .the bleat of a lambkin from some fold - of. bul'ding it may be, the thin quavering cry that is so reminiful of that of a lost and lonely child. At Alderlea, as at other Island farms, once more the season of increase is here.

"Me-ow!" that was Tabby on a yard - path padding through the twilight barnward.

Alex, coming by, hearing, stopped to watch her, smiled.

"That's right," he nodded. "And find yourself a nice warm nest in the hay."

"You never know. It maybe tonight they will come!"

Farmers visited with ours today: stockmen, interested in their livestock, came to make, as do we with Mack or Alex, or it may be alone, a "grand tour" of stables and piggeries, where the little herd and the sows, red or white keep - the latter noting the sunshine on a wall, longing we fancy for the freedom of the old orchard and summer days-to-be.

James, husband of this house, puts down his paper and glasses, and smiles. And repeats, not word for word, nevertheles most suggestively:

"'Let's go to bed,' says Sleepy - head.

'Let's stay a while,' says Slow.

'Put on the pot' says the Hungry One.

'And let's sup before we go!' . . How about it, Ellen?" he grins.

Until tomorrow — — Diary—Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Mother Of Moody Child Asks How To Help Her

Dear Mary Haworth: I am greatly concerned over my daughter, 5, and though I have read Drs. Spock and Gesell, neither sheds light on my particular problem.

Ruthie's moods seem to vary from silliness to extreme rage, the latter followed by depression, during which she says I don't love her, don't want her, etc.

These moods recur despite my constant reassurances and a great deal of patience, I may add. They don't last long but they do worry me.

Otherwise she is a friendly outgoing child with a loving personality, until disciplined or crossed. When we are entertaining, or someone drops in to visit, she wants the spotlight and will misbehave or monopolize the convensation to get attention.

She has few playmates but plays well with those she has for about an hour at a time; then she gets bored. There is considerable rivalry with her teen-age brothers.

Are there any books that might help me understand her? I suppose she needs psychiatric help but we simply can't afford it, as we are deeply in debt for our business. Just as in medical care, the poor get it free and the rich can pay for it; but we in the middle bracket have to do without.

I am convinced this isn't a passing phase with Ruthie as she has exhibited much the same behavior pattern since infancy. Can you help me?—E.P.

Dear E.P.: Psychiatric and analytic pioneers in mental health care have been telling the world for some time that it isn't at all uncommon for young children, in fact even infants, to suffer emotional illess, and to become chronic invalids in this respect, if the case is neglected.

I would surmise from your vignette of Ruthie that she is bearing a burden of this sort, which ought to be studied, diagnosed and treated by therapists specially trained in understanding children's emotional disorders.

Don't tell me that you can't afford to round up the professional help she needs. In the area from which you write, there are family counselling services, maintained in part by community funds, that will cooperate with you in doing the decent thing for Ruthie, if you undertake a dauntless campaign to find health for her.

"Where there's a will there's a way," a proverb says. And if you make up your mind, as in conscience you should, that it is your urgent responsibility to take action to solve this problem, insofar as it can be solved —with the help of God and the counseling fraternity—I think you'll succeed.

Write to: Office of the General Director, Family Service Association of America, 44 East 23rd Street, New York 10, N.Y., for information on family counselling units in your county and state. Mention the nature of your problem and ask for guidance in meeting it wisely.—M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: One of your readers having lost the address of a mission in Korea to which she had been sending old Christmas cards, asked for alternative suggestions: Here is a list:

Robert L. Sheldon, Union Mission of Seventh Day Adventists, Box 1234, Seoul, Korea.

Mrs. Lillian Dickson, Postoffice Box 2131, Tapei, Taiwan (Formosa) Free China.

Col. Hidding, Salvation Army, Djalan, Java 16, Bandung, Indonesia.

Sister Mary Giles Maryknoll Sanitorium, 3100 Noru mbega Drive, Monrovia, California.

Joseph Koikara, Truth Library and Reading Room, Chempakassery Road, Alwaye, Travancore, Cochin State, India.—A.B.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

Guiders Visit Slemon Park

Guiders of the Summerside District were guests of the Slemon Park Guiders on March 21st, at the Air Marsha'l Johnstone School, Slemon Park.

The Summerside meeting opened with the Guide Promise and Law. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Guiders were advised that a Spring training will be held at the Y campsite, Holland Cove the second weekend in June. Mrs. Ferno Rogers suggested the Brown Guiders attend and earn their Pack Holliday certificates. She also asked for suggestions on the type of training wanted by the Guiders.

President Eileen Brophy gave a report on the Guide Tea. Proceeds from the Guiders Pantry Sale amounted to $25. The net proceeds from the Guide Tea amounted to $172.20, and will be turned over to the Local Association.

Thinking Day money collected by all Packs and Companies for the World Friendship Fund amounted to $37.31.

President Eileen Brophy asked the Guiders questions about the Guide Tea, the answers, written on a slip of paper, will be used as a guide for next year's tea.

The meeting adjourned and the S'Side Guiders were then joined by the Slemon Park Guiders. All Guiders were informed that if they wished any trainings, they were to first go to the District Commissioner. The next Brownie Golden Hand tests will be held on Saturday, May 4th at the Y Center at 10 a.m.

A singing game was demonstrated by Mrs. Bernice Wand and Mrs. Eileen Brophy with all Guiders participating. Mrs. Bernice Wand instructed Brown Guiders in games and songs while Blue Guiders participated in square, continuous and diagonal lashing, instructed by Mrs. Eileen Brophy.

A lunch was served by the Slemon Park Guiders.
