Reviews History Of Wire Communications

Rotarian Les Doyle, manager C.N.T. spoke on "Communications" at the weekly luncheon meeting of Rotary held at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. He was introduced by chairman Ted Chandler and thanked by co-chairman Fulton Pierce.

Mr. Doyle in the course of his address referred to the first direct suggestion for the use of electricity in communication over a distance by Roger Bacon in 1267. He was cast into jail for dabbling in "Black Magic".

Electric magnetism lay dormant until 1558, when an apparatus of needles mounted upon dials bearing the letters of the alphabet was invented. Turning one of the needles caused the other to move to the same letter on its dial. The first transmission of the printed word had been born.

"The invention of the electro magnet in 1825 by William Sturgeon in England was a tremendous step forward and the actual foundation of the electric telegraph as known today," Mr. Doyle said. In 1844, Samuel Morse transmitted the first public telegraph message from Washington to Baltimore.

Credit for an invention which allowed two simultaneous transmissions over a single line goes to Rev. Edward Highton, whose discovery led directly to multiple carrier-current systems in use today.

FIRST IN CANADA
It is just 110 years since Canada heard the click of the telegraph key for the first time when a small company opened for business and flashed greetings across its line between the Mayors of Toronto and Hamilton." Mr. Doyle said. "The old line mileage of 89 miles now forms part of the vast Canadian National Telegraphs system of more than 200,000 miles. Communication facilities at present would circle the earth at the equator seven times and still leave 2000 miles of wire dangling into space, he said."

Touching on the traffic load which pioneer telegraphs computed at about 4000 messages a year, the C.N.T. now handles about 15 million messages per year, exclusive of its associated services, including stock exchange ticker service, radio circuits for broadcasting, telephone transmission and microwave transmission, which among other uses, carry television programs.

Mr. Doyle described the various steps of amalgamation which eventually developed into the vast network known today as the Canadian National Telegraphs. The history of the daily newspapers is closely linked with the development of the Telegraph. It is interesting to note that it was well over one hundred years ago that the Associated Press, one of the world's great news-gathering agencies, had its humble beginning with the inauguration of a news service from Halifax to serve the great newspapers of the eastern United States.

HUNGER FOR NEWS
"There was no submarine cable in those days, and with North America growing to one of the world's great powers, there was hunger for the news from overseas. Intense competition developed among the newspapers for the first tidings from the trans-Atlantic shipping. A pony Express was inaugurated by six New York newspapers between Halifax and Virginia Beach, N.S. Correspondents would board incoming Cunard liners at sea and Europe these would be carried on horseback from Halifax to Virginia Beach and from there they would be taken by paddle wheel steamer to Saint John N.B., for transmission by telegraph to Boston and New York," Mr. Doyle concluded.

For driving on the wrong side of the road, a St. Eleanor's resident was fined $5. and costs, while an unlicensed driver from Parkdale was also fined $5. and costs.

Of two persons, one from Central Royalty and the other from West Royalty, each charged with failing to stop at a stop sign, one was fined $5. and costs and the other $10. and costs.

An acquittal and a reprimand were given respectively in the cases of Southport and Central Royalty residents for having defective equipment on their vehicles.

The case of a person from Charlottetown, charged with having intoxicating liquor in a place other than his residence, was adjourned until Friday.

A Marshfield resident was fined $75. and costs or 30 days in jail for driving while impaired.

ROCHFORD SQUARE H. & S. MEETS
An interesting and instructive meeting of Rochford Square School and Home Association was held Thursday night, October 25, in the school auditorium, with a very large attendance. The meeting was presided over by Mr. John Danton, newly elected President of the Association.

The usual routine business followed the reading of the minutes. A special feature of the evening was a talk by Miss Mona Clay. Then followed a film on Parent Film. The parents formed groups where lively discussions ensued.

The many favourable comments heard at the close of the meeting testified to the enjoyment and enlightenment received from Miss Clay's picture and comments.

The large attendance at this meeting shows a commendable interest in education on the part of the parents, and augurs well for the coming year. Delicious refreshments served by the catering committee brought a very successful meeting to a close.

Will Celebrate Young Canada's Book Week 15-22

OTTAWA — Young Canada's Book Week is to be celebrated November 15-22, 1956. This event is sponsored by thirty national organizations interested in work with children, under the leadership of the Canadian Association of Children's Librarians and the Canadian Library Association.

The patron this year is Edgar Osborne, donor to Canada of the priceless "Osborne Collection of Children's Books" in the Boys and Girls House of the Toronto Public Library. This collection includes examples of children's books beginning with those printed for the Puritan child in the seventeenth century. There is only one other collection in the world which may be compared with it for completeness and rare editions - a collection in England. The Osborne Collection is one of the great benefactions to Canadian library service.

The national chairman of Young Canada's Book Week is Miss Dorothy Rogers, head of children's library work in the Calgary Public Library and formerly with the Toronto Public Library and the Notre Dame de Grace Children's Library, Montreal. Miss Rogers has built her celebration around the theme "The Roads to Books".

In reply to the query, "Why do you feel that Book Week is important?" she said "Because we believe the road children must travel will be a happier and easier road if it is paved with worthwhile books. Because we believe that good books will prepare boys and girls to meet, with better understanding, the adult problems of tomorrow. We hope the influence of Book Week will grow in volume and in strength until everyone who is interested in children will share our efforts to make good reading available to the boys and girls in all parts of this Dominion."

Sea View wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruby Ella to John Merton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Toombs, Mayfield, marriage to take place in the near future.

Bases Sermon On Biblical "Come"

The appealing invitation of the gospel of Jesus Christ is the subject of Hugh F. Sensibaugh's message at Central Christian Church last night.

Building his sermon upon the often repeated word in the Scriptures, the word "Come", he cited such familiar passages as "Whoever will may come." "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden" and "And him that is athirst come." Pointing out that the invitation excludes no one, he likened the church to the ark built by Noah, who in faith, believing the commandment received of God, prepared the ark and extended the invitation to the people of that day to repent and come into the ark and be saved.

The powerful appeal of the gospel is evident in the messages delivered by Mr. Sensibaugh as the services continue throughout this week.

Report 3,000 In Canada Will Enlist To Fight In Hungary

TORONTO (CP) — The Legion for Freedom said Monday that 3,000 men across Canada have indicated they want to fight the Communists in Hungary.

Five hundred have actually enlisted in Toronto, said Dr. Leslie Nemes, executive secretary and recruiting officer for the volunteer brigade organized here Sunday night at a meeting of Hungarian-Canadians.

He said about half of the 3,000 are native-born Canadians. "The response of the Canadian people has been tremendous," he added.

First to enlist was 20-year-old Crawford McNair, a University of Toronto student, who said: "I'd like to do something for those people who are being pushed around by Communists. And I don't think giving up a year or so of college is much of a sacrifice."

Even a few girls were reported to have appeared at the Hungarian bookstore serving as a recruiting office and asked "if they can use us over there as nurses."

Organizers of the legion said they are trying to charter planes and obtain weapons and ammunition.

"We must get the first plane under way this week," said Dr. Nemes. "But first of all we need money and arms."

Several thousand dollars have been contributed already, he said.
