Electronics Controlling Factor In 4 New Fields

OTTAWA (CP)—Whenever you hear the word "electronics" think of cont..ol.

That is the nutshell definition of a man who should know his electronics P's and Q's—K. R. Patrick of Montreal, president and managing director of Canadian Aviation Electronics Ltd.

In a recent speech, Mr. Patrick said electronics is the controlling common denominator of the so-called "four A's" — automation, atomic energy, aviation and avionics. The latter is the new term given to the field of guided missiles.

In the past, electronics has been used for high-speed communication of signals and voice. In the future, the main application will be in the acquisition, storage and processing of information.

SOMETHING NEW

From there it will be but a step to translating the information into control of machine actions. All of it done electronically.

Looking at automation, he said this new field of machines producing goods is "mechanization with something added, namely, electronic controls in the form of sensing devices and computers. . . .

"We will be able to make new things. We will make them at less cost. And to a higher standard of precision. . . . .

"The human role in the age of automation will be to use the mind to think and to create, rather than the hands to 'do.'"

CUTS TIME, COST

Electronics in aviation: "The aircraft design can actually be tested in advance through a computer which simulates flight and which enables the designer to iron out all the kinks. Here the employment of electronic techniques actually eliminates a complete step in design—the costly and time consuming intermediate stage of the experimental prototype. . . .

"A close relative .. . is a device called an electronic flight simulator which is used for training on advanced types of aircraft . . . it simulates all the characteristics of a particular aircraft on the ground, in flight, even in battle. "This simulation is so real that pilots in training have been known to pull the lever actuating the ejection seat when they found themselves in a simulated emergency."

COUNTER-MEASURES

In the field avionics, electronics means better guidance of guided missiles and eventual pinpoint accuracy. An error of one degree in guidance at 5,000 miles works out to an 80-mile miss.

Electronics also are coming into counter-measures against electronics. The next logical step, again through electronics, is measures to counter the counter-measures.

Electronics in terms of cash? Mr. Patrick said the annual gross electronic product is about $250,000,000 a year. He expected the figure to increase to $750,000,000 in 10 years and to well over the $1,000,000,000 in 15 years.

Former Baroness Found "Not Guilty" On Narcotics Charge

MONTREAL (CP) — A 12-man jury Saturday found Mrs. Lillian Pursey, dark-haired former baroness, not guilty on a charge of narcotics possession.

The frail 43-year-old woman sighed when the verdict was announced before Associate Chief Justice W. B. Scott.

It was the second trial for Mrs. Pursey on the same charge. Last February she was convicted and sentenced to six months imprisonment, but she won a new trial on appeal.

Her counsel, Myer Gross, admitted that the Crown had proved Mrs. Pursey was in possession of narcotics. But Mr. Gross added that the defence had proved she obtained some of the drugs through physicians while others were in her hotel room without her knowledge.

Mrs. Pursey, who has been almost constantly in the news since arriving here more than two years ago, was first married in her native Hungary to the late Baron Huszar. She was subsequently married in London, England, and that marriage also ended in the death of her husband. Two years ago she was wed in Trenton, N.J., to Cmdr. Harry Pursey, Labor member of the British House of Commons.

Four To Appear In S'side Court After Disturbance

Four men from outside the Province spent the weekend in the Prince County Jail and will appear in court this morning to answer charges of creating a disturbance on Saturday night. The men reportedly began operations on First Street, during or following a dance in St. Paul's Hall, by throwing empty bottles about. Later the window and the glass in the door at Chan's Restaurant were broken and a call from the Grend Cafe reported that a showcase has been damaged there, presumably all done by the same parties.

"STRANGER AT MY DOOR," STRONG DRAMA AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

Featuring a gripping moral tug of war between a notorious gunman, a courageous preacher and his beautiful wife, the starring roles are in the capable hands of Macdonald Carey, Patricia Medina and Skip Homeier.

There is plenty of action in this one from the opening scene when Homeier and his gang hold up a western bank and escape after turning loose all the horses in town and overturning the wagons to prevent the citizens from following them. On the outskirts of the town they divided the loot and separated.

When Homeier's horse comes up lame, he starts out on foot and runs into Dodie, portrayed by little Stephen Wootton, who invites him to the farm of his preacher father, Macdonald Carey, to treat the horse. Although the preacher is out he meets his pretty wife, Peg, played by Patricia Medina.

Suspense reaches a high point in the film when the preacher arrives with news of the bank robbery and his suspicions are aroused when Homeier attempts to escape with one of the farm horses. Realizing he has an opportunity for one of his greatest conversions, preacher Carey talks the gunman out of leaving the ranch.
