A reason for jealousy will dig it out whether it's present or must be manufactured. A "hands off" policy, as far as the office is concerned, lessens opportunities for such machinations.

A woman who is inclined to be jealous of her husband's secretary might try taking an objective look at him, and ask herself if he, as he looks at 45, would have appealed to her at 22. The answer quite definitely would be "no."

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been engaged for three months to a boy I love dearly. When we became engaged we planned to wait until I was eighteen (a year from now), then have a big wedding, which I have always wanted.

ANSWER: Neither one of you is ready for marriage and the best thing to do is wait at least the year as you intended originally.

DEAR MISS DIX: I'd like your opinion of a certain boy. I graduated from high school with him and, in the four years of school he never dated a girl. He's very handsome and could have had all the dates he wanted.

ANSWER: It seems to me that a man's desire, or lack of it, in dating is a matter of personal choice and is not open to interference.

postmaster general of the United States, stated, "America's greatest asset lies in her youth. Healthy normal childhood is vital if our children are to develop into leaders and useful citizens of tomorrow. To help these children to assume their full stature, in our society, will, in truth, be helping America to remain strong. I strongly urge all citizens to support the Foundation's plans to bring health and happiness to deserving youngsters all over the nation."

Established in 1949, the Foundation has acquired the nationally known Brandes School at Tucson, Arizona, for use as a rehabilitation and schooling center for children from all parts of the nation. The first consideration of the foundation is the plight of almost 2,000,000 American children who suffer with chronic asthma.

For years the climate of Arizona has been known as helping patients with sinus disease, hay fever, and other allergic diseases, and latterly physicians and specialists "have become aware of the remarkable progress shown by asthma sufferers after being removed to the Arizona sunshine and environment provided at the Foundation's school."

In addition to care, schooling, and treatment of asthmatic children of the Ladies' Social Club of Borden, was waited upon by its members and presented with a suitable gift, as a token of gratitude for her contribution towards the work of the United Church there.

and tread once more the old paths of our living; to watch a road wind out and over a hill, by Pa's reddening maples, and to look again upon the landmarks of roof and field and woodland we know. The seasonal Seagulls on scavenging, flashing wings dipped to the stream and soared to settle in a strange picture on the slope above; the mill gray-gabled, regarded complacently the pond as a pictured place, it sat snug against its background of trees; above the rim of hills, white clouds sailed away boating prettily on a sunny blue sea.

But out of the day, a gift of the twilight and to attend our returning with James and a lad, came ten, the Foundation sets up a nationwide program of education to make parents more aware of asthma, enabling them to recognize and secure treatment of the disease before it gets a deep hold on their children.

rain... A quiet rain of April. In silvery drops it washes now the pines, encouraging meadows and gardens to green and set their engaging blossoms about. "Yes," James offers, setting forth to visit the newest lamb of this place, birthed in our absence, "this will bring the grass!"

So: "It is not raining rain to me, It's raining daffodils! In every dimpled drop I see Wild flowers on the hills. The clouds of gray engulf the day And overwhelm the town— It is not raining rain to me It's raining roses down."

It is not raining rain to me. But fields of clover bloom. Where any buccaneering bee Can find a bed and room. A health unto the happy, A fig to him who frets — It is not raining rain to me It's raining violets!"
