

Members Of B And P Club Observe International Night

Members of the Charlottetown Business and Professional Women's Club celebrated "international night" at a recent meeting held at the Charlottetown Hotel.

Miss Helen Yeo, chairman, asked several speakers to give their impressions of the International Congress they had attended.

Gertrude Love reported on the London, Eng., congress in 1960, and Helen Dunbar and Alma Yeo spoke of the Montreal congress in 1958. Bessie Prosser commented on the Paris congress in 1959. Madelyn Clark and Huguette Aershall reported on the 1962 congress in Oslo.

Other speakers included Emma Tait, commenting on the United Nations conventions, and Gertrude Villett, who reported on UNESCO and the status of IBSFPW as a rotating membership on the Canadian commission.

Emma Holmes spoke on the activities of Mrs. Mary Goddard, and Helen Burns about a Palestine refugee girl and the opportunities that would be hers at Rawallah, Jordan. This training centre for girls is sponsored by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency, and the CFBPW has contributed to it.

Helen Yeo summed up the ways in which the club has contributed to world wide understanding.

Guest for the meeting was Miss Kiko Saito, I.B.P. Tokyo, Japan, public prosecutor for the Yokohama district, who is touring the Canadian provinces to observe Canadian criminal procedure.

Eileen Woodruff, who recently attended a meeting of a national group of hair stylists, demonstrated her new "spray 'n' housse" for 1963, using Mrs. Eunice Cadmore as her model.

During the short business meeting which preceded the program, Mrs. Margaret Holmes, United Nations representative for the Charlottetown club, gave reports of UN meetings.

Edna Sutherland, correspondence secretary, read a letter from the Red Cross society, stating that the annual meeting would be held at the Charlottetown Hotel Feb. 21.

Flags and dolls of various countries were on display.

Rock 'N Roller Paul Anka Weds Beautiful Paris Model

ZURICH, Switzerland (CP) — Canadian-born Paul Anka, the Ottawa schoolboy who became famous as a teenage rock 'n' roller, finally snatched off his adolescent image Saturday by marrying a beautiful blonde model in Paris.

Anka, now 22 and regarded as a "pop singer," took his bride 20-year-old Anne de Zogheb, a fashion model born in Egypt and reared in France. All composure, and has been going strong ever since.

"I do not have to think about work until mid-March," Anka said. "Until then, however, we are on holiday 'holidays.' I doubt the last time I was on skis about four hours' drive from here. They arrived in Zurich by plane from Paris Saturday after their marriage there, first in a civil ceremony in the town hall, and later in a religious ceremony in the chapel at Orly air port.

"I need a holiday and we certainly are going to have one," said Anka, whose widespread business affairs qualify him as a multimillionaire. The dark-haired singer made his mark at 16 with the hit record "Diana," his own composition, and has been going strong ever since.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Thoughts Of Young Years Of Boyhood Days Return

James sat down the pall of warm water he was carrying to "those young cattle" in a shed this morning, to look back on this morning to the valley of a mill-stream. Seeing what Scanning field and sky and cloud, feeling the alien touch of the young wind of day on a cheek, gazing the depth of the sunshine, and doubtless thinking with some longing of that day to come, when the springtime should again put its gentle haze over the fields.

We fancy, too, when James looks off along the farmlands, thoughts of the young years return: the boyhood days, tales of which enrapture the children, even to the young Mrs. Granddaughter, who must learn from him, the details of the life and living of then. This includes the farm and the farming.

"Would you believe it?" he will say. "But no, you couldn't picture it as it was, then. But I remember when that field back there where the cattle pastured last summer, was all in bush the day. Yes, he will nod, and all the hard way." Yet what intriguing stories he receives in with his toilsome little incidents interwoven. And we listening can see him at work, and hear the tinkle of the bell on the "lead-cow" of the little herd that went down near there along more woody paths than now, to drink at the summer-stream.

He tells them of the farming when the living and moving of it depended on the horse of the farm. He speaks of them, remembering them so easily. "And I was only a young lad then. Anka, and let me see now... yes, it was driving that brown colt. He was like his mother, the old mare. Not small, but not feeling big and awkward, you know."

And the children will nod and smile and eyes expectant, waiting for the next story. "Well, I had him hitched to the buggy. It was new that spring. Shining. And a light and handy wagon if ever..."

"Like the Deacon's One Hoss Shay," Mack will say, "I had a roof." "A hood!" James will make the correction. "Yes, but in fine weather, that could be folded down, when the U.S. also will loan 'suitable launching devices.'"

"The day is warming up, Ellen," James commented this morning. He smiled. "You couldn't almost believe the sky has a look of spring."

"Will there come tulips?" we chuckled to cover a longing. "They always have come, Ellen," he said. "I expect they're in the garden now. It's a silver span of moonlight over the stream to night. We know, having stopped on the lane-bridge when returning from an evening outing but long ago. Scampie came down through the silence to meet us, and together we admired it. And loved deeply the night."

By every sign: Cap and jacket a-hanging, work-boots by the door. Not small, but not feeling big and awkward, you know."

When you walk into some houses, you don't feel anything. When you walk into others, you feel as though you would like to get to know the people that live there or did live there. You notice this difference right away.

Mrs. Brunko was trained as a dietitian but decided to run an estate eight years ago because it is well-paying and she can work from home, on her own time.

Many people just see me floating from lunch to an appointment and then home and think my job is all glamor. But there's a lot of hard work," she says. When she first started selling, she worked from eight o'clock in the morning until midnight, day after day.

Women Have Practical Ideas When Time To Buy House

By PATRICIA RUSAK TORONTO (CP) — Women are far more practical than men when it comes to buying a house, says Mrs. Shirley Brunko, chairman of the women's division of the Toronto real estate board.

"That would be a lovely house if we didn't have to live every day," is a comment made by women to Mrs. Brunko.

The everyday little things that influence a woman's choice of a home are such things as a door directly from the garage into the house for bringing in groceries, an entrance through which service people can pass into the basement without passing through other parts of the house, and especially if she has children, a main floor wash-room.

Women consider whether the furniture they already have will be appropriate for their new home. "If they have been accustomed to modern design and furniture, they are bound to want older and colonial styled homes."

Women are also tired of being chased and want to live near libraries, schools, shopping centres.

The kitchen is one of the most important factors in a woman's choice of a home, says Mrs. Brunko. "If a woman likes the house that are about the same price, she will probably choose the one with the nicer kitchen."

Although women are practical, they usually ask questions that are "different" or "sneaky." They also look for charm in a house, says Mrs. Brunko.

Anglian WA Holds Meeting

KENNINGTON — St. Stephen's Anglican Women's Society met at the home of Mrs. Herbert Casley, Spring Valley recently with the president, Mrs. James Evans in the chair.

Part of the Women's World Day of Prayer was used in the opening devotional period. Roll call was answered with scriptures and prayers were read "Obey," by ten members. One visitor was present.

Mrs. Jessie MacLeod was in charge of the study book, "Guide Book to the Bible." The secretary, Mrs. Bora Campbell read the minutes of the latest Diocesan Board meeting.

The members agreed to comply with a request from S. A. View W. A. that they furnish part of the program for a social evening to be held in Sea View Hall on February 22.

Articles were passed in for the Dorcas work. Remnants donated by Eaton's and Simpsons were auctioned off by Mrs. Keith Harrington.

The program consisted of a Bible contest by Mrs. Keith Sudebury, a contest, Trees of the Bible, Mrs. Jessie MacLeod, and readings by Mrs. H. B. MacLeod and Mrs. Leigh Payer.

Mrs. Jessie MacLeod, celebrating her birthday on the day of the meeting, was addressed by Mrs. Leigh Payer, and presented with a WA pin by Mrs. James Evans. A birthday cake made by Mrs. Bora Campbell for Mrs. MacLeod's honor, was cut and passed when the hostesses, Mrs. Bora Campbell and the members, served lunch at the close of the meeting which concluded with a hymn and prayer.
