

An American hunter, 49-year-old O. J. Underwood of Youngstown, Ohio, is convinced that Canadian moose know how to get their revenge. In five trips to Canada he has shot three moose. On his latest jaunt he didn't have to go in search of them, one almost fell into his lap, figuratively speaking. While driving on highway 25 miles from North Bay, Ont., he was on a 15-foot embankment on the right side of his car, smashing both halves of the windshield, demolishing the hood and bending the roof almost down to the steering wheel. The animal, believed attracted by the car lights, then slid off the vehicle with its neck and two legs broken and died 20 minutes later. Says Mr. Underwood, back in Youngstown, "I'll come back to Canada to fish and hunt partridge, but not moose. The ones I shot may have more children around."
