MARY HAWORTH

Early Vitamin Supplement May Prevent Deformity

Dear Mary Haworth: I can never thank you enough for your compassionate comments concerning our problem about our 6-year-old son's harelip.

I hope it will help others who have the same problem as much as it has helped me.

I was going to say "God bless you" but I think He already has. Sincerely, A.E.

Dear A. E.: Many thanks for your kind - hearted note. It is a reflection of your generous spirit. Now I comprehend even better than before the source of David's solid self - esteem, that enables him to absorb the tactless curiosity of his playmates and remain unruffled.

Your earlier letter included a query as to the cause of harelip. You recalled that your father once said, years ago, that he couldn't understand why God would punish a person that way.

I mentioned that somewhere in my readings of recent years I had encountered a theory that harelip may derive from a deficient nutritional intake deficiency at the time the embryo is being formed.

A day or two after the foregoing exchange was published, I came across the following news story just released:

"Cleft Palate Reduced by Bvitamins. A group of Newark (N. J.) physicians has cut the incidence of cleft palate and cleft lip nearly in half by Bvitamin therapy, they reported here (Atlantic City) today (June 20).

"The Newark physic ians, headed by Dr. Lyndon A. Peer, chief of plastic surgery at St. Barnabas Medical Center, said they worked with 576 expectant mothers who previously had had one or more children with cleft lip or palate.

"They gave 158 of the women a vitamin supplement of folic acid (one of the B-complex vitamins associated with growth) and vitamin B-6 during the first three months of their pregnancy. 2.9 per cent gave birth again to children with deformities, most of which were cleft lips or palates. Of the treated women, only 3.8 per cent gave birth to children with deformities, again mostly cleft lip and cleft palate.

"The researchers, in their paper prepared for delivery today (the story continues)" said: 'The evidence indicates that B-vitamin supplement in the first three months of pregnancy may be helpful in reducing defects.' But they said a larger study will be made to doublecheck their results."

Parenthetically the story adds that "some animal research has indicated that overdoses of vitamins also can injure the unborn child." So, a word to the wise for pregnant women: don't prescribe for yourselves. Get a doctor's guidance.

Well, I offer this news report for what it may be worth in refutation of your father's unhappy notion that a cleft lip signifies God's displeasure with that particular family tree. M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I think you misinterpreted or misapplied a Bible quotation recently. The problem involved a debate in a business office, with half of the employees wanting to pass the hat for a housewarming gift for a co-workers who had just bought a house, and the other half objecting to this as a racket.

They asked your verdict. You said in effect that Providence is on the side of the open-handed. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver, Scripture tells us," you added.

In my view, the Lord wants us to give cheerfully to any fund that helps the less fortunate, as the cancer fund, the heart fund, the fund for crippled children etc. Our Lord says "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

As for relatives, friends and co-workers, I am sure the Lord doesn't care if we give them gifts. Sincerely, K.R.

Dear K. R.: The proof of love of God is love of neighbor. And one's neighbor is the person immediately at hand — be he (or she) relative, friend or co-workers. Contributing to funds for medical research is commendable too, but not more so. M.H.

ITALIAN FASHIONS

Pale Beige, Mossy Tones Lots Of Black For Fall

By LOUISE HICKMAN

ROME (AP) — Considerable divergence in line and color but unanimous agreement on hemlines that cover the knee—these were the advance signs on the eve of Italian fall and winter fashion showings.

The presentations start Wednesday in Rome. Then move to Florence July 14 for five more days there.

If Rome designer Farquet has his way, lilac shall be the color that was big in lipsticks may be back. He is working in that direction with fuschia and cyclamen shades, to be mixed with melon or coral for fall.

Should such colors seem too rash, De Luca will offer the indispensable navy and white in white—and promises to deliver this classic pair in some exciting new ways.

Foreign color scheme will be broadened with red or pink and violet, pink with rust. Lancetti is working with a simplum to pink. Violet and

PICK QUIET SIDE

More designers are lining up on the quieter side with De Luca, however. Galitzine talks classic colors: Black, white, and a range of reds.

Valentino says pale beige, pale mossy tones, and lots of black. Pale beige at Carosa, too, along with brilliant reds and greens, and shades at tray that she interestingly calls dense. Jewel colors of amethyst, topaz and jade—plus tortoise shell—will be presented by Mingolini-Gugenheim.

In silhouette, It's high waists, important sleeves, and straight, unfitted backs, but not necessarily all at once. The knee-covering hemline may be subject to interpretation.

De Luca and Valentino will continue to give importance to a small, close bodice and a high waistline- or suggestion of same. De Luca will lengthen jackets at the same time, whereas Valentino says "definitely empire." Fontana shows of a waistline "slightly raised in front, slightly lowered in back."

WAIST LOWER

Carosa will mark the waist a bit lower than its natural point. Carosa and Forquet are both placing emphasis on sleeve and shoulder line. At Valentino, it's just "big, new sleeves."

Lancetti likes a casual feeling, will go strong on suits for both day and evening. His silhouette will be close to the body in front, straight in back. Mingolini-Gugenheim will come out strong for straight - backed clothes, too.

Galitzine is mysterious about "soft draping." She says her line will be similar, but not the same, in feeling to the bias-cut silhouette that she presented in January for spring and summer.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Visitors Find Peace As Summer Days Pass

The pages of the year's book continue to turn. Winter's white story is past: its silence, its storms and its calms. Outdoors, the frosty paths. Indoors, the coziness we enjoyed, as occupied with a piece of knitting or lost in a book, with James reading in bride. They wore street length dresses of yellow nylon over taffeta featuring fitted bodices and full skirts with matching wedding ring hats and shoes. They carried yellow and white shasta daisies.

Constable Alan Burchill was best man, and the ushers were Cpl. Colin Craig and Cst. Charles Clark.

The bride's mother wore a pale green linen sheath and bolero jacket to match. She wore a white flowered hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow carnations.

The mother of the groom wore a dior blue sheath with bolero jacket and matching pill box hat. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

The reception was held at Park Royal Church Hall. The toast to the bride was proposed by J. Norman MacLeod, uncle of the bride, with response by the groom. Several telegrams were read by the best man.

For travelling the bride wore a two piece suit of pink linen with white mink collar, and matching pink flowered cloche hat. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The couple honeymooned for two weeks through eastern United States and Niagara Falls, Ontario.

They will reside in Montague.

CONSTABLE AND MRS. R. B. LUTES

Park Royal U.C. Scene Of Double Ring Ceremony

Park Royal United Church was the scene of a colorful wedding recently, when the marriage of Margaret Elaine, R.N., daughter of Mrs. Florence MacLaren and the late Daniel MacLaren, to Constable Reginald Bowley Lutes, RCMP, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bowley G. Lutes, Moncton, N.B. was solemnized by a double ring ceremony.

Rev. J. H. Tye officiated. Mr. Leslie Hiscott, church organist, played the wedding music. Miss Arlene MacDonald sang "The Wedding Prayer" before the ceremony, and during the signing of the register. "I'll walk Beside You."

Baskets of white and yellow mums decorated the church, and the guest pews were marked with white and yellow satin bows.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Wendell MacLaren, wore a floor length gown of white nylon over taffeta. It was fashioned with a scooped neckline and had a fitted bodice with long tight sleeves. The skirt was bell shaped falling into a chapel train. A crown headdress trimmed with pearls held her tulle veil in place. Her bouquet was yellow tea roses.

Miss Marion MacLaren, sister of the bride, was the matron of honour. The bridesmaids were Miss Janice Lutes, sister of the groom, and Miss Barbara MacLaren, sister of the toil, we suspect we shall wish for them some relieving breaths of that cool invigorating air we had in the winter-time gone!

Spring's story began with a soft wind blowing in over our rim of valley. Streamlets trickled, and were increased, and sought passage to river and sea. In its pages were precious pictures. Remember? Pussy willows silvered. First green in orchard and yard and fields. The house cleaning? Yes. And also "Why the robins are here!" we, greeting them, said. And presently the millstream called its orchestra to practice, and every little field-slough, and pond had its music. Scent of fresh-stirred earth we had. And the age-old rite of the seeding. There was a new lace on the trees, and cattle come to pasture. And like the plaques and memorials that mark historic spots and events, lilacs blossomed, denoting, not only the homes of now, but those sites almost forgotten, where stood island homes in that now long-ago.

Lilacs and apple-bloom. And first bees pilfering their sweets. And a first great cherry pie posing. And swallows come home to rafter and eave. And Nature, the great matchmaker, smiling, as everywhere fancies "lightly turned to thoughts of love."

Now it is summer who writes her story, on the pages of the year's book. Exceedingly lovely it is: of the vacation-time, and thousands of folks homing for a holiday, or coming, more or less strangers, to visit our shores. Finding the charm of "Isle of Gilead, which first of all you recognize is its peace. You find this, we think in the byways, and off in the far fields where only the echoes of the busy world without come to "lie down and sleep.' Or on the shores, where the tides "break, break, break" with strange regularity, washing in and out on the warm sands.

There is peace at the sun-up with its silvery dew, and when the evening's purple shadows draw close.

"Here we go again!" Papa Starling commented with a pointed grin when we came to the clotheshe this morning. "Same tablecloths, same towels."

"And James' khaki shirt and dresses!" we added.

"And your aprons" he nodded.

"How is the summer using you?" we queried.

"Oh good! As a matter of fact better than I deserve' he declared seriously.

"And the Family of small ones?"

"Gone" he smiled proudly. "Grown and smart and off now on their own."

"Ellen, you never, never, think of bedtime!" James calls.
