

Moslems Seek Large Turnout In Sun. Vote

By BASIL CHAPMAN
ALGIERS (Reuters)—Moslem nationalists are campaigning for a massive turnout when Algeria votes for independence in the self-determination referendum next Sunday.

Painted slogans exhorting men and women to vote for an independent, sovereign Algeria are everywhere — on buses, walls, roads and even covering signposts and "no parking" signs.

The campaign also is discreetly designed to avoid aggravating the fears of the territory's European settlers and widening still further the breach between the races.

In small towns and villages throughout the countryside, orators of the National Liberation Front which won the right to self-determination for Algeria, harangue huge rallies with parades of schoolchildren waving the green — and white FLN flag and Moslem girls in dresses of the same colors.

The usual high point of such rallies is a march past of Moslem fighters in the battledress of the FLN, their caps pulled down to eyes-level.

The crowds chant nationalist songs and the women keep up the shrill "you - you - you" traditional for occasions of triumph and disaster.

An estimated 40,000 Moslems attended one such rally in Arba, less than 40 miles from Algiers last weekend.

Close to 100 per cent of eligible Moslems are expected to vote "yes" Sunday to the only question on the ballot: "Do you want Algeria to become an independent state co-operating with France under the conditions defined in the Evian (ceasefire) Agreements?"

Europeans resigned to a future in a Moslem-run Algeria are hardly expected to vote "yes," but it is equally unlikely that they will vote "no" in large numbers. Most are expected to simply abstain.

Park To Obey; Thursday's Race Is Off

Charlottetown Driving Park will not hold a harness racing program Thursday night, June 28.

A CDP spokesman told The Guardian-Patriot yesterday that the capital city track would not attempt to defy the ruling of the Prince Edward Island Racing Commission which cancelled Thursday's scheduled races.

The ruling was a penalty to Charlottetown Driving Park for holding a race program last Thursday June 21 after the commission had ordered them that afternoon not to do so. The CPD had been allotted the June 21 date but it was changed when Summer's program was pulled out on June 20 and the race rescheduled for Thursday, June 21.

The Charlottetown track went ahead and raced on June 21 and drew the ire of the commission which cancelled this Thursday's card.

It was learned today that representatives of The Charlottetown Driving Park met Tuesday with Hon. M. J. McQuaid, attorney-general and Hon. J. D.

Tax Collector Is Acquitted In Assault Case

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Tax collector Ralph Gerald McCarthy has been acquitted of a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

He was charged by Kenneth Lundrigan of Dartmouth following an incident June 19 in which the tax collector testified he stopped his car on a Dartmouth street to talk to Lundrigan about a $100 tax bill.

Lundrigan claimed he had bruises and tenderness in his neck, tenderness in his rib cage and a bruise over one eye following a subsequent tussle with the tax collector.

Magistrate M. D. Haley, in acquitting McCarthy, said it seemed like a "plain case of a constable trying to do his duty and coming up against a tiger — and you don't treat a tiger like a kitten. He had to hold a man who was screaming, kicking and using obscene and foul language."

"I think the wrong man is charged here in court today," the magistrate said.

CBC Official Explains Act To Drop Comco

HALIFAX — (CP) — J. Douglas Nixon, the CBC's program director of English radio and television networks, said here Wednesday the decision to drop the Perry Comco show this season was based on consideration of program strength.

He said at a press conference the CBC picks the strongest shows for each season's schedule after a detailed study of what programs are available from the United States and Britain.

Out of 20 1/2 hours of network time a week, only nine and a half hours are available or imported programs, he said.

He said it was felt the CBC could do better than the Perry Comco show for another season. The program has been shown
