We ask the public to remember that we sell Watches as cheap as anyone.

We warn the public against those who offer Watches for sale and take very much less than asked.

An instance came to our notice the other day where $35 had been asked and $20 accepted for a Watch that we and other regular Watchmakers sell for less than $15. Since then, several similar cases have been brought to our notice.

Our object is not only to sell goods but to supply articles, whether Watches or Jewelry, that will best answer the purpose required by our customers and to sell at such a price that it will pay them to buy from us.

THE PIRATE.

By Sir Walter Scott.

Mordaunt was indeed no stranger to this inhuman superstition, current at a former period among the lower orders of the Zetlanders, and the more generally adopted, perhaps, that it served as an apology for refusing assistance to the unfortunate victims of shipwreck, while they made plans of their goods. At any rate, the opinion, that to save a drowning man was to run the risk of future injury from him, formed a strange contradiction in the character of these islanders; who, hospitable, generous and disinterested, on all other occasions, were sometimes, nevertheless, induced by this superstition, to refuse their aid in those mortal emergencies which were so common upon their rocky and stormy coasts. We are happy to add that the exhortation and example of the proprietors have eradicated even the traces of this inhuman belief, of which there might be some observed within the memory of those now alive. It is strange that the minds of men should have ever been hardened towards those involved in distress to which they themselves were so constantly exposed; but perhaps the frequent sight and consciousness of such danger tends to blunt the feelings to its consequences, whether affecting ourselves or others.

Bryce was remarkably tenacious of this ancient belief; the more so, perhaps, that the mounting of his pack depended less upon the warehouses of Lerwick or Kirkwall, than on the consequences of such a north-western gale as that of the day preceding; for which (being a man who, in his own way, professed great devotion) he seldom failed to express his grateful thanks to Heaven. It was indeed said of him, that if he had spent the same time in assisting the wrecked seamen, which he had employed in rifling their bales and boxes, he would have saved many lives, and lost much linen. He paid no sort of attention to the repeated entreaties of Mordaunt although he was now upon the same ship of said with him. It was well known to Bryce as a place on which the eddy was likely to land such spoils as the ocean disgorged; and to improve the favorable moment, he occupied himself exclusively in securing and appropriating whatever seemed most portable, and of greatest value. At length Mordaunt saw the honest pedler fix his views upon a strong sea-chest, framed of some Indian wood, well secured by brass plates, and seeming to be of foreign construction. The stout lock resisted Bryce's efforts to open it, until, with great composure, he plucked from his pocket a very neat hammer and chisel, and began forcing the hinges.

Incensed beyond patience at his assurance, Mordaunt caught up a wooden stretcher which lay near him, and laying his charge softly on the sand, and approached Bryce with a menacing gesture, and exclaimed, "You cold-blooded inhuman rascal! either get up instantly and lend me your assistance to recover this man, and bear him out of danger from the surf, or I will not only beat you to a mummy on the spot, but inform Magnus Troil of your thievery, that he may have you flogged till your bones are bare, and then banish you from the mainland!"

The lid of the chest had just sprung open as this rough address saluted Bryce's ears, and the inside presented a tempting view of wearing apparel for sea and land; shirts, plain and with lace ruffles, a silver compass, a silver-hilted sword, and other valuable articles, which the pedler well knew to be such as stir in the trade. He was half disposed to start up, draw the sword, which was a cut-and-thrust, and "darraign bataille," as Spenser says, rather than quit his prize, or brook interruption. Being, though short, a stout, square made personage, and not much past the prime of life, having besides the better weapon, he might have given Mordaunt more trouble than his benevolent knight-errantry deserved.

Already, as with vehemence he repeated his injunctions that Bryce should forbear his plunder, and come to the assistance of the dying man, the pedler retorted with a voice of defiance, "Dinna swear, sir; dinna swear, sir. I will endure no swearing in my presence; and if you lay a finger on me, that am taking the lawful spoil of the Egyptians, I will give ye a lesson ye shall remember from this day to Yule!" Mordaunt would speedily have put the pedler's courage to the test, but a voice behind him suddenly said, "Forbear!" It was the voice of Norma of the Fife-head, who, during the heat of her altercation, had approached them unobserved. "Forbear!" she repeated; "and, Bryce, do thou render Mordaunt the assistance he requires. It shall avail thee more, and it is I who say the word, than all that you could earn to-day besides."

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Mining Gems in North Carolina.

Despite the talk about diamond fields in Kentucky, but few gems of any sort have been found in the limits of the United States. The most celebrated diamond beds are in India, Brazil and South Africa, although single stones have occasionally been picked up in Virginia and North Carolina. Mexico furnishes many gems, particularly opals, but North America, while rich in gold and silver appears to be poor in precious stones. North Carolina has furnished some interesting stones, particularly the hiddenite, a grass green gem allied in chemical character to the topaz, but of a color previously unknown. It occurs in Alexander county, in the foothills east of the Blue Ridge, and was named for its discoverer, Hidden.

In the same region, in McDowell county, where there are gold mines, are also found in great variety stones of more or less value. The mining is carried on chiefly for gold by the hydraulic sluicing system, in which the mountain streams are employed to wash down the hillsides. The earth is sluiced out for gold, and all the stones which remain in the sluices are carefully examined. A correspondent from the mines states that valuable rough specimens are often found, and as much as the value of $4,000 in opals, topazes and other fine stones have been found in a day, and on one occasion a diamond worth $1,000 was taken out. There are other localities in that region that are without doubt equally rich. —Detroit Free Press.

Life in Morocco.

The suburbs of Tangier are beautiful. There are exquisite gardens with high hedges of geraniums and heliotropes, beds of roses of every hue and innumerable small flowers, unknown in your country. Figs, apricots, pomegranates, pears, plums, olives, dates and walnuts grow in luxuriance. So do oranges and lemons; the former are far superior to those found in California and Florida, and I have seen them sell here at three cents a dozen. The markets are good, fish being abundant. Fine large roe shad bring from fifteen to twenty cents each; sole the same; Spanish mackerel from ten to twelve cents each; small fish five cents a pound; meat from five to nine cents; capons twenty-five cents each; chickens twelve to fifteen cents each; eggs fifty cents per 100 in summer and ninety in winter, as large and fresh as any at home. Milk and butter are not good, for some reason which I have not been able to find out, but in all probability the cows have degenerated since the time when Ham brought his share here from Noah's settlement of his estate. The cream and butter is not fit for Christians to eat. A good (?) cow, costing here $20, will give an average of two quarts a day until she goes dry, and miserable, tasteless stuff it is, on which no cream rises and which souurs in eight hours. I use goats entirely, and from a good pair of nannies, provided I keep them well fed, can get eight quarts of good milk a day. —Tangier Cor. Philadelphia Call.

In Brief, And to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order. Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy. Remember: No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. mar 17 eod & wky
