The Baptist Convention.

THE DELEGATES GATHERING AT BRIDGETOWN IN LARGE NUMBERS.

BRIDGETOWN, N. S., Aug. 18.—The Baptists are gathering into this beautiful town. The governors of the college were in session this afternoon and continue to hold council this evening. The new seminary, a perfect gem of architecture, is to be handed over to the board of governors on the 25th inst. There will be arrangements made to have a grand programme for the opening, which will be on or about Sept. 7th. Prof. C. A. McDonald, of the manual training department, is at Wolfville preparing for the opening of the academy.

The ministerial institute was held this evening. Papers were presented by Rev. S. B. Kempton and I. E. Bill. Various subjects were discussed. The convention proper does not commence till the 20th inst., but there are many matters which call for attention which will be noticed before the formal opening.

Dr. F. L. Wilkins, of Chicago, secretary of the B. T. P. V., is here, and will present to-morrow evening the claims of the organization upon the denomination.

Extensive preparations have been made by the church here for the reception of delegates, who are coming in with every train.

The W. M. A. society held a meeting this evening in the large vestry of the church. Mrs. Manning presided.

A Brave Woman

SAVES SIX CHILDREN FROM THE FLAME—THE HOUSE WAS ENTIRELY CONSUMED—NO FURNITURE SAVED.

(Amherst Press, Thursday.)

Yesterday morning Mr. Jacob C. Brown, carriage builder, of Northport, arose at 4 15 o'clock. He kindled the kitchen fire and then proceeded to the blacksmith shop, a short distance away, to put a shoe on a horse, leaving his family asleep. Returning in about half an hour, what was his horror at seeing smoke issuing from a window upstairs over the kitchen in which five children were sleeping. He rushed to the window down stairs, in which his wife and youngest child were sleeping, and shouted to his wife to open the front door as the house was on fire, and he could not get at the kitchen on account of the flames. Mrs. Brown, instead of opening the door, rushed through the burning kitchen, having presence of mind enough to shut all the doors after her, and ran up stairs to the room where her children were sleeping. Mr. Brown by this time had a ladder to the window and the mother passed her children out one by one to the father, who deposited them on the ground. After the last of the five, the eldest of which is eight years old, had been handed to their father, Mrs. Brown was so exhausted and choked with the smoke, on account of which, Mr. Brown says, he could not put his head inside the window, that she could not have been able to get out without the assistance of Mr. Brown. After reaching the ground the first thought was for the infant she had left in the bedroom down stairs, and after this was out of danger she sank to the ground completely exhausted.

Mr. Brown tried to get out some of the furniture but the fire had got such headway that next to nothing was saved, the neighbors arriving too late to be of any assistance. The house was completely consumed by the time that the outbuildings were untouched. None of the children's clothing was saved and they were forced to go to the nearest neighbor's house in their night clothes. The house was only partly insured.

The Bathing Costume.

People of refinement choose for their bathing costumes those which, while they are most comfortable and permit the greatest freedom of the body, are yet absolutely modest, writes Mrs. Mallon in a reasonable article on "Seashore and Mountain Frocks," in the August Ladies' Home Journal. We read, and occasionally see very elaborate suits of white and pink, and those that are trimmed until they seem better suited for a Roman chariot race than a black course serge, or flannel, makes the most comfortable suit, and perfect modesty is achieved when this suit is in two pieces; that is, the trousers which reach just below the knees, and the bodice, which comes up well about the throat, and has elbow sleeves, are in combination, making one, while over this is worn the short skirt which fastens to buttons about the waist, the mode of attachment being hidden under a canvas belt. Long black wool stockings are in order, and if you are going to bathe much, and wish to keep them from wearing out, it will be wise to get them a size larger, and to insert in their feet the soles sold in the stores for knitted slippers. It is best to wear a rubber cap, and so protect one's hair from the salt water, because this is certain, in time, to injure it, though one often sees articles recommending the salt bath for the hair.

MAKES FLESH AND BLOOD.—When the system is all run down and there seems to be no hope of obtaining nourishment for the body by the ordinary process of food supply and digestion, when the body is sinking fast, then is the time to use Miller's Emulsion of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It always works wonders, because it is a flesh and blood maker, and contains all the constituents for nourishment found in wheat. In fact, Miller's Emulsion is a perfect "staff of life," and has saved and cured thousands. In big bottles 50c, and $1 at Charlottetown drug stores.

Water Supply of Liverpool.

A great feat of engineering has been performed for the purpose of supplying Liverpool with water. The London Times says that the Corporation of Liverpool and their engineer have actually re-made a great lake—Wyrnwy in Mid Wales—which existed as a lake in the glacial epoch, but which, during the time cognisable by human record, has been a marshy valley, through which a tributary of the Severn slowly wound. A village, a church, a burial ground and a pleasant country house had to be removed bodily; a vast dam, unequalled in the world, had to be built, and the water had to be conveyed through pipes and storage tanks as far as Liverpool, across the Mersey and over seventy miles away. The work has been going on for eleven years. It was in 1876 that the engineer, Mr. George F. Deacon, recommending the construction of a great dam, which would create a lake nearly five miles long, and drain some 23,000 acres, at a height of a little over 800 feet above the sea, the total cost of the undertaking being estimated at about four millions sterling. The dam was built of masonry the stone used being taken from a quarry close by. All the alluvial deposits was removed for then foundation, and there the huge stones were laid and cemented to the bed-rock; stones weighing two, four and sometimes even ten tons each were brought to their place by a narrow gauge railway, and put in position by means of steam cranes. Major-General Sir Andrew Clarke, after a careful scientific inquiry, said that "nothing but an earthquake could possibly disturb the dam." Its length is 1,172 feet; its thickness at the base is 129 feet; its height to the parapet of the viaduct, which serves as a carriage road on the top, is 161 feet. The supply for Liverpool, according to the original plan, was to begin at 13,000,000 gallons a day, with a large power to increase. The lake will hold at least a thousand times that amount; but on the chance of there being at any time a temporary obstruction, the reservoir at Wyrnwy has been made to hold over 40,000,000 gallons and Prescott reservoir a very large store. The supply is therefore regarded as practically inexhaustible.

Tommy's Punishment.

"Tommy," said Mr. Fosdick, severely, "your mamma says you have been naughty and I must punish you. Come with me."

"What are you going to punish me with, pa?" asked Tommy, as he accompanied his papa to the upper room.

"With the strap," replied Mr. Fosdick, producing a gad which Tommy remembered very distinctly, having seen and felt it on former occasions.

"The strap is made of leather, isn't it, papa?"

"Yes."

"They make leather out of the skins of cows, don't they, papa?"

"Yes, and the process is called tanning, which makes the tanning I am about to give you with this strap particularly appropriate."

"I saw a cow to-day, papa."

"That's strange," Mr. Fosdick answered, sarcastically.

"It had its skin on yet, and when it came down the street a woman was afraid, and came inside our gate till the cow went by. I don't know what makes women afraid of cows, do you?"

"You ain't afraid of cows, are you, papa?"

"No."

"You are a brave man and ain't afraid of anything, are you, papa? I told Rats Robinson yesterday you could thrash any man on the street, and Rats said his papa could wallop daylight out of you. He couldn't, could he, papa?"

"Well, I should think not."

"Of course not. That's what I told him."

"It was quite right of you to stand up for your father."

"O, I always do. Do you know what Rats Robinson's real name is?"

"No. What is it?"

"It's Nicodemus. I don't think much of a papa who would name his boy Nicodemus, do you?"

"No, I don't."

"Where do names come from, papa?"

"O, from different places. Some are found in the Bible."

"Thomas is a Bible name, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"Did you hunt in the Bible to give it to me when I was born?"

"I knew it was there."

"Is it in that big Bible in the parlor?"

"Yes."

"Why do you ask me that?"

"Because my Sunday School teacher says that everybody ought to read some in the Bible every day, and—"

"There, that will do. Go and see if your mamma doesn't want you."

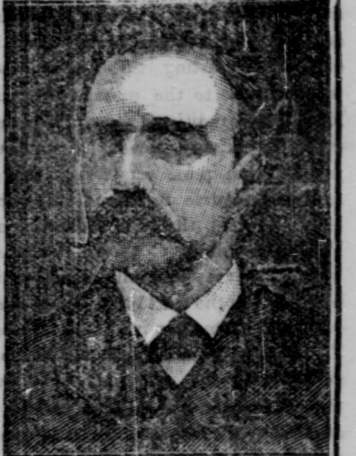

And Fosdick hung up the strap and put on his hat and went down stairs.—Detroit Free Press.
