McCarthy, Crawford Voted To Baseball Hall Of Fame

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe McCarthy, the manager who led New York Yankees to new heights without ever playing a game of big league ball, and Samuel (Wahoo Sam) Crawford, one of the great power hitters in the "dead ball" era, were named Sunday to baseball's Hall of Fame.

McCarthy and Crawford were selected by a special 11-man veterans' committee. They will be inducted formally at Cooperstown, N.Y., July 22.

To be selected by the committee, a player must have been inactive for 30 years and a manager or umpire must have been out of the game for five years. Crawford finished his 19-year major league career in 1917 and McCarthy retired as Boston manager because of physical erhaustion in 1950.

Baseball fans came to know McCarthy by his "Marse Joe" nickname that dates back to the days when he played and later managed at Louisville in the American Association. In the majors, McCarthy won nine pennants and seven world championships.

His streak of four straight world series victories with the Yankees from 1936 through 1939 wasn't topped until Casey Stengel made it five in a row with the same club, 1949-53.

McCarthy, 69, lives on a farm near Buffalo, N.Y. He retired when poor health made him step out at Boston. He moved to Boston in 1948 after bossing the Yankees from 1931 to 1946.

MANAGED CUBS

McCarthy managed Chicago Cubs from 1926 to 1930, winning the pennant in 1929 but losing the world series to Philadelphia.

In 32 years as a manager in the majors and minors, McCarthy's teams finished out of the first division only once, when he was sixth at Louisville in 1922.

Crawford, 76, was born at Wahoo, Neb., and drew his nickname from his home town. He broke in with Cincinnati in 1899 after playing minor league ball the same year. After playing with Cincinnati through 1902, he moved to Detroit where he played until 1917, teaming with the great Ty Cobb in the Tigers' outfield.

Wahoo Sam was the only man ever to lead both majors in home runs although his career total of 96 homers hardly compares with the "lively ball" pace of today. He topped the National League with Cincinnati in 1901 with 16 and led the American League with seven in 1908.

Crawford's lifetime average was .309 for 19 years yith a total of 2,964 hits. His lifetime total of 312 triples still is the major league record.

Baseball Owners Reject Higher Salary Request

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league owners Saturday rejected a request that the minimum player salary in the American and National baseball leagues be increased to $7,500 from $6,000 but did approve a request that the owners meet annually in December with the player representatives of all clubs.

Eddie Yost of Washington newly named American League player representative, said the players would consider their next step at a meeting of all player representatives at Tampa, Fla., March 6.

The owners also refused to permit an inactive player to serve on the pension committee except to complete his term. Bob Feller, Cleveland pitcher who recently retired and helped formulate the pension plan adopted Friday, thus must step down. Yost is the new American League delegate. Robin Roberts of Philadelphia is the National League representative.

Feller, and similar player representatives in the future, may complete their terms as delegates but on a non-voting basis. Feller's term ends this summer.

Rallentando is the Italian musical term for a gradual slowing down of the tempo.

Marion Seeking Hoop Franchise

NEW YORK (AP)—Marty Marion, former Major League baseball star who managed Chicago White Sox the last two years, said Tuesday he is seeking a franchise in the National Basketball Association.

The onetime "Mr. Shortstop" of St. Louis Cardinals acknowledged he had had several talks with NBA President Maurice Podoloff and said he was leaving for Louisville Tuesday night in his first move to line up a franchise in the professional circuit.

Marion said he and his business and real estate partner, Milton Fischmann, are far enough along in their planning to be actively seeking players and a coach.

Kaline & Tigers To Negotiate

DETROIT (AP)—Outfielder Al Kaline said Tuesday night he has been invited to discuss contract terms with Detroit Tigers today.

Kaline said the meeting was suggested by John McHale, director of player personnel for the Tigers and he "readily accepted."

The young outfielder and the club have been at odds on his 1957 salary. Kaline is reported to be asking $30,000, about a 25 per cent raise.

The obstacle, an explosives-laden tug, is sunk close to Ismailia. Salvage experts are expected to begin work on the tug in a few days.

Experts said 17 obstacles of the original 44 remain uncleared in the channel, but only the tug was called a "substantial" block to Suez Canal traffic.

Few N. H. L. Rookies Of The Year Made A Mark Later

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Maybe someone should tip the leading Calder Memorial Trophy candidates for the title of National Hockey League rookie of the year that few winners in the last 10 years have developed into outstanding players. Some were out of the league in jig time.

There have been notable exceptions—Montreal Canadiens' Boom Boom Geoffrion, Detroit's Glenn Hall and Terry Sawchuk of Boston for instance. The first — year sensations in some cases have been just that before fading into obscurity or sticking around as average players.

What about the men passed up by selectors in their rookie year? Maybe this list will convince the rookies that winning the Calder can be something of a jinx:

Maurice Richard didn't win the trophy. Neither did Gordie Howe, Jean Beliveau, Ted Lindsay, Doug Harvey, Red Kelly, Ted Kennedy, Sid Smith. But it's easy to find their names on all-star teams and just about any other award available in the NHL.

BOWED TO STEWART

The explosive Richard, eligible for the trophy in 1943, scored 54 points on 32 goals and 22 assists for Montreal Canadiens. Gaye Stewart of Toronto Maple Leafs, who eventually played for four of the six league clubs and now serves as an official — took the rookie honors that year.

Howe joined Detroit Red Wings in 1946 and was no great shucks with only seven goals and 15 assists in 58 games. Howie Meeker of the Leafs, and now Toronto coach, won the trophy.

Defencemen Kelly of the Wings and Harvey of Canadiens broke into the big time in 1947 when the selectors settled for centre Jimmy McFadden who had a 24 - goal rookie year. McFadden faded, eventually was traded to Chicago and wound up his playing career this week with Calgary Stampeders of the Western Hockey League.

Lindsay joined Red Wings in 1944 when Toronto goalkeeper Frank McCool shut out the Wings three straight in the Stanley Cup playoffs but illness forced him out of the game the next season.

DIDN'T LAST LONG

Pentti Lund of New York Rangers was the 1948 rookie but disappeared from the NHL in two or three seasons. Goalkeeper Jack Gelineau of Boston, the 1949 Calder winner, was out of the league by 1952 and out of hockey altogether two years later.

Beliveau stepped up to Montreal Canadiens from Quebec Aces as a regular in the 1953-54 season, scored 34 points—the lowest he has ever done — and Camille Henry of the Rangers got the nod for the Calder.

Henry failed to make the team the next year, was sent to Providence of the American Hockey League and now is back with New York. Beliveau has been first-string all-star centre the last two seasons and is considered in some circles as one of hockey's all-time stars.
