Russian Scientist Says They're Right, Others Wrong

By BOB JOYCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL, (CP) — Russian physiologists told scientists from 41 other countries Thursday that a fellow-countryman's theories of human impulse and behavior are right and everybody else is out of line.

The views of the Soviet delegation to the 19th International Physiological Congress were presented by Dr. K. M. Bykov, director of the Pavlov Institute in Leningrad. It was named after Russia's greatest physiologist, the late I. P. Pavlov.

Reads Paper

Dr. Bykov read a paper, in Russian, at a congress symposium on physiological theories of learning. The paper was titled "new data on the physiology and pathology of the cerebral cortex."

It dealt with the theories of Pavlov and descriptions of experiments carried out by Pavlov's followers and was simultaneously translated, as he read, into French and English.

Elsewhere at the congress Thursday the new 11-man council of the International Union of Physiological Sciences, formed Wednesday, elected a Canadian, Dr. Charles E. Best of Toronto, co-workers with the late Sir Frederick Banting in the discovery of insulin, as president.

The Highlight

Highlight of Thursday's proceedings was Dr. Bykov's paper. Whilst it was well known that Soviet scientists have for a long time looked to Pavlov for their inspiration, Western delegates were watching to see how strongly the Russians would come out against followers of opposing theories.

Dr. Bykov said many of them had "lapsed into mysticism." Through failing to realize that Pavlov's teachings ushered in a new epoch in the natural sciences, they had allowed themselves to be led away from the path that would have brought them to genuine scientific knowledge.

Soviet scientists, who regard themselves as the heirs to Pavlov's theories, maintain that both mind and thought are physical objects that can be treated in an objective fashion. Some scientists however believe there is a non-physical side to man, called variously a "third personality" by Freud, a "vital force" by Dunbar, or a "soul".

At Thursday's meeting Dr. Bykov said such theories involved "reactionary and mystical ideas about psychical processes."

Germans Form Largest Group Of Immigrants

OTTAWA, (CP) — Germans formed the largest group of immigrants to Canada in the first seven months this year, the citizenship and immigration department said Wednesday.

Of the 98,033 coming to Canada in the January-July period, 19,939 were Germans, nearly 2,000 more than in the same period a year ago.

The total number of immigrants represented a 15 per cent decrease from the 114,744 admitted into Canada between January and July last year.

The English took over from the Dutch as the second largest group to immigrate.

More than half the immigrants in the first seven months this year—50,465—were bound for Ontario. The others: 19,209 to Quebec; 10,218 to Alberta; 7,947 to British Columbia; 5,077 to Manitoba; 2,347 to Saskatchewan; 1,477 to Nova Scotia; 774 to New Brunswick; 277 to Newfoundland; 210 to Prince Edward Island and 32 to the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

Of the 53,306 workers, the rest were wives and children, 15,126 took jobs in manufacturing and construction, 13,142 in agriculture, 6,963 in services and 5,144 in the professions. A total of 62,869 were under 30 years of age.

Churchills To Observe 45th Anniversary

By DON STAINSBY
LONDON, (Reuters) — On a late summer afternoon just 45 years ago Saturday an eligible Edwardian bachelor named Winston Spencer Churchill walked down the aisle of London's St. Margaret's church with Miss Clementine Hogler.

On that day, Churchill wrote later, he "married and lived happily ever after . . . with a being incapable of an ignoble thought."

Sir Winston, near 79, and Lady Churchill, 68, will mark their anniversary Saturday by attending the St. Leger classic horse race as guests of the Queen and will go on later to spend the week-end at the Queen's Scottish home.

During the 45 years of their marriage, Lady Churchill has concentrated on being housewife, hostess and helpmate.

At the moment she is running three homes, the prime minister's two official residences and their own country estate at Chartwell. She also entertains the Prime minister's important guests, listens to his speeches before he delivers them, and has supported him on the platform during campaigns.

She considers keeping Sir Winston fed to be one of her main activities. She once jokingly made up a list of instructions for her husband's care in case she died first.
