HE WENT HUNGRY.

General Howard's Experience With the Colored Waiters In a Richmond Hotel. "General O. Howard," said General David S. Stanley, "was over a religious, conscientious man, with a deep seated impulse to raise up and benefit the colored men. I will remember a story about him illustrating his want of knowledge of the negro character as it emerged from serfdom. After the war General Howard was the head of the freedmen's bureau and went to Richmond, accompanied by a United States senator, who was also interested in the great work the bureau had been designed to prepare. "At dinner time they were taken into the dining room of the hotel by the man in charge and the colored waiters were called up and introduced. " "Boys," said the man in charge, "this is General Howard, who is doing so much for the colored men of the south. See that he gets a good dinner quickly. Take care of him." " "Oh, yes," they replied, "General Howard! We all know 'bout him. He's our Moses. He's takin' care of us." "The other tables were occupied by unimportant young officers, who, not knowing General Howard or not standing in awe of his strong religious views, began to curse the waiters violently and abused them for not waiting on them more promptly. "The outcome of it all was that the unimportant young officers were waited upon and got their dinners at once. General Howard did not fare well at all, and after waiting a full hour left the dining room as hungry as when he entered it. "In great indignation the United States senator who accompanied the general strode up to a group of waiters and thundered: " "What do you mean by treating General Howard so?" " "Why, boss," was the reply, "dem other gemen give us a dollar apiece before dinner commenced." —Boston Herald.

ANCIENT LITERATURE.

How Some of It Was Fortunately Saved From Destruction. Considering that the whole of ancient literature was confined to manuscript, it is wonderful that so much of it has come down to us. The preservation of some old writings has been almost miraculous. To a single copy preserved in a monastery of Westphalia, for instance, do we owe all that we have of Tacitus. This is the more remarkable since the emperor of that name had copies of the works of his distinguished ancestor placed in all the imperial libraries and caused ten copies of them to be transcribed yearly. Still, only the one copy has been found in modern times. A page of the second decade of Livy, we are told, was discovered by a man of letters on a battledoor while he was amusing himself in the country. He rushed up to town, but he was too late, for the battledoor maker "had used up all his parchment the week before." Two manuscripts of Cleero on "Glory" were presented to Petrarch, who lent them to an old preceptor. This latter gentleman, being pressed by want, pawned them and died without revealing the name of the pawnbroker. Two centuries afterward they were mentioned in a catalogue of books bequeathed to a convent, but could not be found. It is supposed that Petrus Aleyonius, the physician to the institution, appropriated them, and having transcribed some of the thoughts to his own writings destroyed the originals. The original Magna Charta of England, preserved in the Cottonian library, has certain mutilations, presumably from a pair of shears. It is said that Sir Richard Cotton, calling one day at his tailor's, discovered that that man was holding in his hand, ready to cut up for a pattern, a copy of the great Magna Charta, with all its appendages and seals. —San Francisco Chronicle.

Precipices in the Himalayas.

There is one remarkable peculiarity of the series of Himalayan ranges between the vale of Kashmir and the central Asian watershed. They are one after another cut right across by ridges. The reason for this is that the rivers were there before the ranges were formed, and as, by the crinkling of the earth's crust the ranges were raised, the rivers cut gorges through them and maintained their flow. Nanga Parbat is part of the true and principal Himalayan range, and its summit rises to the stupendous altitude above sea level of 26,630 feet. Close to its foot, not more than ten miles in horizontal distance from the peak, the Indus flows through a desert gorge, and here the height above sea level of the river bed is not much above 8,000 feet. It is easy to conceive from those figures on how vast a scale nature's architecture is here set up. I have never been down this part of the Indus gorge, but a friend of mine who was there told me that the path along the side of the gorge is in places perilously narrow and carried across precipices of such appalling character that at one point a servant of his who lost his footing fell a mile in vertical height and was, of course, smashed to atoms. One side of Nanga Parbat sinks to this gorge by a series of ridges and ravines—that is, the Chilas side. The other two sides of the mountain, for it is on a triangular base, are likewise defined by long valleys, one of which is filled by the great Tarsingh glacier. —North American Review.

Ventilation.

Have we ever stopped to think how our ancestors, two or three generations back, lived and flourished with little or no ventilation in their sleeping apartments? The night air used to be considered a very dreadful nuisance to health and a sure inducer to colds. Bedrooms were kept closely shut, and yet our ancestors, many of them, were harder than we, and lived to good old ages. Animals burrow into their holes at night, breathing the same air over and over again, while birds and fowls tuck their heads under their wings. Of course, ventilation is absolutely necessary for proper comfort, cleanliness and health, but people have lived on little or none of it for hundreds and thousands of years. —New York Tribune.

Temporary.

"I put a fence across my back yard to keep the boys out." "Did it work?" "Yes, as long as it staid up." —Detroit Free Press.

West Indian negroes are to be the subjects of the experiments of an English society which wishes to transfer them to British central Africa.

Less tobacco is consumed in Great Britain in proportion to the inhabitants than in any other civilized country.

A Hard Swallow.

An eminent barrister, noted as much for a habit he had of sucking lozenges as for his eloquence, was once defending a murder case. He was standing with a bullet in one hand and the usual lozenge in the other, when suddenly, in the midst of a fine burst of eloquence, his face fell, and in a tone of agony he cried: "Gentlemen, I've swallowed the bullet." —London Tit-Bits.

Safe While It Lasts.

"I haven't got any case," said the client, "but I have money." "How much?" asked the lawyer. "Ten thousand dollars," was the reply. "Phew! You have the best case I ever heard of. I'll see that you never go to prison with that sum," said the lawyer cheerfully. —Boston Traveler.

SPECTACLES.

Over twenty-five years I have been in the Spectacle business and during that time have fitted hundreds and hundreds of persons. Some had put off getting glasses so long that they could not see a large 4 inch letter A without going within 2 or 3 feet of it, and might have gone blind if they had put off getting glasses much longer. Others have been fitted or rather misfitted, with wrong glasses by travellers, and charged a great deal more than they ought to have been. This year our traveller, Mr. C. H. White, intends calling on parties at their homes in the country, to test eyes and show samples of our goods. Should he call on you I bespeak for him your favorable consideration, and any order you may give him will be filled as soon as possible and guaranteed by me. Glasses can also be exchanged at the store, CAMERON BLOCK City, if after a trial they do not prove as satisfactory as you wish.

Warning!

I wish to inform the public that several parties are travelling the country using my name and pretending to be selling Spectacles for me. Mr. C. H. White is the only traveller that I employ. He is competent to test eyes and fit Spectacles properly. If any others call and say they are selling for me please ask them to show their licence
