Property Purchased On Admiral Street For Building Lots

An important real estate transaction was completed yesterday when a syndicate of Charlottetown business men purchased the property of Mr. John H. Lewis, 48 Admiral Street, consisting of about 25 acres, and buildings.

It is planned to sub-divide the property into approximately 100 residential lots. The location is convenient to the city, the view very pleasant, and it is expected that many people will take advantage of it for building purposes. It is hoped to have all modern conveniences available shortly.

At the present time of the status of these children is at the present time. "It would appear that there are 100 children under the guardianship of the Children's Aid Society of Charlottetown, but the Society has no record to show where these children are placed and no regular visitation to indicate what progress they are making."

"It was not possible to ascertain how many children were under the care of the Children's Aid Society of Summerside and where these children were located. Apparently the number is negligible — if there are any."

The report notes that the Roman Catholic Orphanage provides for approximately 126 children, of whom 106 are carried on a free basis without any assistance whatever from government, parents or elsewhere. The remainder are partially maintained from various sources. There are 65 children in the Protestant Orphanage.

Among other auxiliary organizations, the first and most important is the Catholic Welfare Bureau, operated by a Diocesan lay board, which gives service in both the child and family welfare field, which last year raised approximately $8,000 for various welfare activities. Actually it is the only social agency in Prince Edward Island headed by a trained social worker and carrying on a social case work program.

Other organizations mentioned in the report are the Y.M.C.A., which serves both men and women and operates quite extensively from its new modern building; the Red Cross Society, the Women's Institutes which are very active throughout the whole Province, the T. B. League and the Service Clubs.

Reviewing the provisions of the Children's Protection Act, the report notes, as one of its most striking defects, that the legislation gives "status, authority and responsibility to a child welfare agency, but does not provide the means for the agency to carry out its responsibility."

Another noteworthy defect in the Act is that it provides no funds whatever to assist in the establishment of child welfare services or to assist child welfare agencies. The absence of such provision "makes it difficult or impossible for a child welfare agency to function adequately under the Act."

The Act is "equally silent" in reference to the source from which the director (appointed to receive guardianship of children on behalf of the Government in the same manner as a child welfare agency) will receive funds to maintain such children after they are committed to his care. Some $15,000 has been appropriated by the Government for this purpose for the coming year, and 55 children are now being paid for at the rate of $20 a month. "Although the Government is quite within its rights in appropriating money and using it in this way, nevertheless it is hardly fair that the director should be placed in a position different from the child welfare agencies as far as funds are concerned. This is an added reason for questioning the silence of the Act on all matters relating to either the maintenance of children or the financing of the operations of a child welfare agency."

The report commends the step taken in passing the Mother's Allowance Act, 1949, which provides for payment to widows with one or more children under sixteen. In addition, the Provincial Government pays approximately $75,000 a year in social assistance not provided for by statute, but approved by order-in-council. "It cannot be said that the coverage is complete or the relief granted adequate in terms of need."

TORONTO, May 18—(CP)—A new $4,500,000 traffic artery designed to relieve congestion on north-south routes to downtown Toronto, proved something less than a success in its first test today. Automobiles stood bumper-to-bumper for more than 16 minutes on the 1-1/2 mile Mount Pleasant route at the peak of heavy morning traffic. Police attributed congestion to sightseers.

"Completely Inadequate"

climate must be developed."

Municipal Relief

Municipal relief, the report finds is actually non-existent. The City of Charlottetown pays a few dollars in some isolated cases but the amount is negligible and the City is in no financial condition to bear the costs of relief. Only with the assistance of the Provincial Government can it be expected to find a solution for its welfare needs and requirements.

"In actual fact the social assistance plan now in effect in Prince Edward Island is superior to the general relief program in either Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, and the Province should be encouraged in further improving this phase of its welfare program."

Field Staff Limited

Reviewing the present welfare facilities and resources, the report notes that the field staff of the Provincial Department of Public Welfare is limited to investigators for old age pensions and mother's allowances, and no attempt has been made as yet to organize generalized field staff. "These investigators are untrained and have no special aptitude or training for what is generally known as social welfare work." Only person in the department, the chief welfare officer (Mr. J. Trainor) has had formal training in social work and might therefore be considered qualified to practice case work.

The report notes that there is no machinery in the Division for the routine investigation of complaints in respect to neglect and the mistreatment of children.

"Neither of the two Children's Aid Societies (at Charlottetown and Summerside) at any time in its history employed a full-time executive director and although both societies have employed part-time agents, so called, trained social workers have never been employed in a part time capacity. Consequently the membership and the board gradually lost interest until at the present time the Summerside Society has actually disbanded and the Charlottetown Society has reached the point where the question is being asked, should it continue or go out of business," the report states.

Lack of Information

"Children were delivered to each of these Societies during the course of their history and it is very difficult to tell just what the
