AN APT SERMON.

During the pastorate of Mr. Haynes, Rev. Hosea Ballou, one of the earliest apostles of Universalism in this country, came into this town and announced that on a certain Sabbath and at a certain place he would preach. Mr. Haynes' friends persuaded him to forego his third service on that day, and go over and hear Mr. Ballou. He did so. Mr. B. invited him into the pulpit. He went. After the sermon, the preacher turned and asked Mr. Haynes if he had anything to say. He immediately arose, and delivered a fifteen-minute sermon—the most memorable one, probably, he ever delivered in his life. His text was, Gen. iii. 3: "And the serpent said unto the woman Ye shall not surely die." Topic: Character of this preacher. He was: 1. An old preacher. 2. A cunning preacher. 3. A laborious preacher. 4. A heterogeneous preacher. 5. A presumptuous preacher. 6. A successful preacher. 7. A universal preacher. This, as may well be imagined, fell like a bomb in the enemy's camp, stirred up an intense excitement, and gave rise to a long, voluminous, and more or less bitter controversy.—The Mes.enger.

AN AWFUL MIDDLE.—A young gentleman by the name of Conkey, having been united in the holy bands of wedlock, sent the marriage notice, with a couplet of his own composition, to a local paper, for publication, as follows: Married on August 1st, A. Conkey, Esq., Attorney at Law, to Miss Euphemia Wiggins. Love is the union of two hearts that beat in softest melody, Time with its ravages imparts no bitter fusion to its ecstasy.

Mr. Conkey looked with much anxiety for the issue of the paper, that he might see his name in print. The type into whose charge the notice was placed, happened to be on a spree at the time, and made some wonderful blunders in setting it up, thus: Married on August 1st, A. Donkey, Esq., Eternally at Law, to Miss Euphemia Piggins. Love is an onion with two heads that belt in softest melody, Time with its cabbage imparts no better food to an extra day.

A Well-known Banker, whose lower extremities were much afflicted with the gout, was accosted one morning on the way to his office by an Irish beggar-woman for alms. He sharply refused her; but, undaunted, she made another appeal to his feelings by heaving a deep sigh, and adding, "Ah! if your honour's heart was as tender as your toes, you would give me something."

A Kentuckian, becoming incensed at the boastfulness of an Englishman in the train of Sir Morton Peto, as to the superiority of British inventions, exclaimed, "Pshaw! They are of no account. Why a house-painter in my neighbour's garden a door so exactly in imitation of an old oak, that last year it put forth leaves and grew an excellent crop of acorns; and another fellow up in Iowa has just taught ducks to swim in hot water, and with such success that they lay boiled eggs!" The Englishman from that time forth exhibited a modest and subdued air.

A Yankee, being in company at a tavern in Albany, a Dutchman happened in, and inquired the name of the Yankee. "I will bet you a bottle of wine," said he, "that I have the hardest name in the company." "Done," says the Dutchman; "what is it?" "My name, sir, is Stone," said the Yankee exultingly. "Well, den," rejoined the Dutchman, "your name is Stone, and mine is HARDER (which was the case)—now pay de bottle!" The Yankee remarked that this was rather a hard concern but that he was fairly beaten; and he paid the forfeit.

Said a fond mother to a young hopeful of eight: "Tommy, my love, fetch in that stick of wood." Ah! my dear, responded the youth, "the grammatical portion of your education has been sadly neglected; you should have said: 'Thomas, my son, transplant from that recumbent collection of combustible material on the threshold of this edifice, one of the curtailed excrescences of a defunct log.'"

A young lady said to her beau, as she held a pot of hot water in her hand: "Promise to marry me or I'll scald you."—"Thru the water," he replied, "I had rather be scalded once than every day in my life."

Little Girl, happening to hear her mother speaking of going into half-mourning, said: "Why are we going into half-mourning, mamma? are any of our relations half dead?"

It has been ascertained that the pen that was mightier than the sword was William Penn.

It was said of a certain lawyer who died: "He had simply gone to stay with his best client."

No cover was ever made so big or so fine as to hide itself. Nobody was ever so cunning as to conceal his being so.

At what season did Eve eat the apple? Early in the fall.

Business is the salt of life. "Very likely." But who wants salt for a perpetual diet?

Why are birds like farmers?—Because they depend upon their crops for support.

What is that which a man may have never possessed, and may yet leave behind him?—A will.

"I am a broken man," said a poor poet. "So I should think," was the reply, "for I have seen your pieces."

An innocent young sportsman, in order to shoot a squirrel on the top of a tall tree, climbing another near it; and on being asked his reason for so doing, said that he didn't want to strain his gun by a long shot.
