

Leg Is Claimed In Rabies Fight

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP)—New Hampshire and Quebec aren't co-operating fully with Maine to combat a rabies outbreak, says Dr. Dean Fisher, head of the state department of health and welfare.

"New Hampshire isn't doing very much and hasn't done very much," Dr. Fisher said, adding that "as long as they have rabies in New Hampshire it poses a constant threat for us."

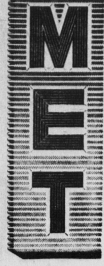

Fisher said there has been a rabies epidemic in Quebec for several weeks, indicating a lack of effective preventive measures there.

The main problem areas are in Oxford and Franklin counties, Fisher said. The area bordering New Hampshire and Quebec.

He said in these counties will focus have been hit by the disease.

Fisher said 23 cases of animal rabies have been reported in Maine this year, although none since July 30, and all were in Oxford and Franklin counties.

"We won't be able to breathe easy up there until we get a whole year without a case," he said.
