Racy Literature.

Too Bad.—Miss Betsy Pearl is "fair, fat and forty," and unmarried. She manages to obtain an honest and comfortable living by keeping a small shop of "notions" in the lower part of the city. She is a spruce old woman, and among other articles vends spruce beer. One evening a customer called for a glass of the beverage, inquiring at the same time if it was new made beer.

"No exclaimed a waggish bystander, just as she was about to apply in the affirmative, "I can assure you it is old maid beer."

The wag was seen suddenly to leave the lady's premises with a glass flying after him.

Horse Trade.—When Colfax was a young man, he and a judge once got to bantering one another about trading horses, and it was agreed that the next morning at nine o'clock they should make a trade, the horses to be unseen up to that hour, and no backing out under a forfeiture of twenty-five dollars. At the hour appointed, the judge came up leading the sorriest-looking specimen of a horse ever seen in those parts. In a few minutes Mr. Colfax was seen approaching with a wooden saw-horse on his shoulders. Great were the shouts and the laughter of the crowd, and both were greatly increased when Mr. Colfax on surveying the Judge's animal, set down his saw-horse and exclaimed—"Well, judge, this is the first time I ever got the worst of it in a horse trade."

Near the village of M—— there lived a farmer, who had engaged a son of the Emerald Isle to work for him. One morning in the spring Pat was sent to harrow a piece of ground. He had not worked long before all the teeth—except three—came out of the harrow. After a while the farmer came out in the field to see how Pat proceeded, and asked him how he liked harrowing.

"Oh," replied Pat, "it goes a bit smoother now since the pegs are out."

A Physician going down State street with a friend of his, said to him:

"Let us avoid that pretty little woman you see there on the left; she knows me and casts on me a look of indignation. I attended her husband—"

"Ah! I understand; you have had the misfortune to despatch him."

"On the contrary," replied the Doctor, "I saved him."

Said a youngster, in high glee, displaying his purchase to a bosom friend on the sidewalk: 'Two cocoanuts for ten cents! that'll make me sick to-morrow, and I won't have to go to school.,

Luff'em Down Easier.—A pious old negro, saying grace at a table, not only used to ask a blessing upon his board but he would also petition to have some deficient dish supplied.

One day it was known that Cato was out of potatoes, and suspecting that he would pray for some at dinner, a wag providing himself with a small measure of the vegetables, stole under the window next which stood the table of our colored Christian. Soon Cato drew up a chair and commenced:—

"O, massa Lord will dow in dy provident kindness condesend to bress ebery thing before us and be pleased to bestow upon us a few taters—and all the praise."

(Here the potatoes were dashed upon the table breaking plates and upsetting the mustard pot.)

"Dem's em, Lord," said Cato looking with surprise; "only just luff em down a little easier next time."

'Ah, Mr. Simpkins, we have not chairs enough for company,' said a gay wife to her frugal lord. 'Plenty of chairs, madam.' he replied' 'but too much company.'

"I say, boy, is that the fire?" asked a gentleman of a ragged urchin, and pointing to a dense volume of smoke that was issuing from the windows of a warehouse. "No, sir, that is only the smoke," replied the boy.

A bankrupt was condoled with the other day for his embarrassment. 'Oh, I'm not embarrassed at all,' said he; it's my creditors that are embarrassed.'

'I am willing to split hairs with my opponent all day if he insists on it,' said a distinguished lawyer in a speech at the bar. 'Split that, then,' said the opponent, pulling a coarse specimen from his own head and extending it. 'May it please the court, I didn't say bristles.'

Old Bill W——, of Fluvanna County, was dying; he was an ignorant man and a very wicked one. Dr. D——, an excellent physician and a very pious man, was attending him. The old fellow asked for bread; the doctor approached the bedside, and in a very solemn tone, remarked, 'My dear fellow, man cannot live by bread alone.' 'No,' said the old fellow, sorter reviving, 'he's 'bleeged to have a few wegeetables.' The subject was dropped.

Manner.—Manner, may be, and is, seen in every action of life. An elegant manner will even render that bitterest pill which that odious creature man is compelled to swallow very nearly as sweet as an acceptance.

If manner is essential in refusing, it is equally so in giving. That charming creature Lady Seamley, used to present three-and-sixpenny brooches to her poor acquaintances with such an air that they seemed to be of a thousand-fold value. One poor creature of a governess kept hers carefully wrapped up in jeweler's wool, and finally died, leaving it as a legacy to her vulger, because the horrid creatures wished to turn it into money, and then discovered its true value.

Moral Gems.

How often do we sigh for opportunities of good, whilst we neglect to improve openings of Providence in little things which would frequently lead to the accomplishment of most important usefulness!

It is much easier to think right without doing right, and to do right without thinking right. Just thoughts may, and often do, fail of producing just deeds; but just deeds are sure to beget just thoughts.

That God calls, it is His mercy; that thou come at His call, it is his mercy; that thou dost labor, when thou art come, it is His mercy; and thou art rewarded for thy labor, it is His mercy.

With most of us, idleness is the parent not merely of uneasiness, but withal of fretfulness, malevolence and the whole host of evil passions. The phrase 'aching void,' may be ridiculous to those who criticise grammatically, but is true to those who feel humanly. To supply this void is an object, and moreover a certain effect of a regular and sustained and judicious method of self-instruction. The used key is bright. If the steel be wrought up and refined to a high temper, the cloudiness of the vapor will perish from it almost at the instant that it is breathed upon it.

A single snow-flake—who cares for it? But a whole day of snow-flakes, obliterating the landmarks, drifting over the doors, gathering on the mountain to crush in avalanches—who does not care for that? Private opinion is weak, but public opinion is almost omnipotent.

Duty.—No man's spirits were ever hurt by doing his duty; on the contrary, one good action, one temptation resisted and overcome, one sacrifice of desire or interest, purely for conscience sake, will prove a cordial for weak and low spirits, far beyond what either indulgence, or company can do for them.

Is there one minister in ten that dare tell his congregation what he personally thinks of their present condition? Again, does that minister expect any better fate than his congregration?

"Mangling done here," is a sign known to very many, and we fear that in many of our churches the above words written over the pulpit would not be out of place, from the fact that the whole truth is not brought forth.

Some do first, think afterwards, and repent forever.

Are my wife and my children eating food and wearing clothing got by lies told by me in my business, day after day? When I sit down to my table, does it ever occur to me that all these "fat things" are the preparations of money that I and my clerks lied for? Do I ever think that the rich man opened his eyes in hell, and that I may one day be doing likewise.
