Misery. Charles Kingsley's recipe for being miserable is as follows: "Think about yourself, about what you want, what respect people ought to pay to you, and what people think of you. In other words, center all your thoughts on self, and you will have abundance of misery."

A Teacher Taught. "I will teach you a thing or two," said the teacher as he jumped at the hedgehog. And as he jumped back, yelping with pain, the hedgehog remarked: "Don't whine. I was only giving you a few pointers."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FOLLOWING THE HOUNDS. It is not alone in exceptional recreations like fox-hunting, that a woman needs steady nerves, strong muscles and a healthy, vigorous constitution. She needs them in her every day duties and pleasures. Recently a Buffalo lady called upon Dr. R. V. Pierce, of that city and stated that she was so nervous that after months of trial she could not learn to ride a bicycle.

She was put under a scientific course of treatment, consisting of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before meals and his "Favorite Prescription" after meals. The "Favorite Prescription" promptly cured the weakness and disease of the organs distinctly feminine, from which she suffered and restored strength and steadiness to the nerves. The "Golden Medical Discovery" cleansed the blood, making it pure, rich and invigorating, and built up solid, muscular flesh. The lady now rides her bicycle with grace and ease and without trepidation. Both medicines are for sale by medicine dealers. Dr. Pierce answers letters from ailing women without charge.

"I suffered with a bearing down pain in my pelvis and a hurting in my back and loins," writes Mrs. Tillie Cunningham, of Weir, Chocoma Co., Miss. "Whenever I would take a walk or ride very far it would always make me sick. After using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and "Golden Medical Discovery" for three months I can ride or walk and feel well afterwards. My appetite is good, all of my bad feelings have disappeared and I am strong and well."

You can secure Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser free by sending stamps to cover customs and mailing only. Paper-covered, 31 one-cent stamps; cloth-covered, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

IN MEMORY OF TWO SLAVES.

Story of Two Monuments in the Wilds of the Kittatinny Mountains.

Nine miles northeast of Harrisburg, in the solitude of the Kittatinny range of mountains, stand two unique monuments. The spot is far from any human habitation, amid curiously shaped and massive boulders and on the very crests of the ridge. The wanderer who by chance strays into this region may well pause in astonishment before a roughly hewn rock upon which stand two carved headstones of white marble bearing the following inscriptions:

UNKNOWN. Here in the solitude of God's acre lies one whose life was filled with pathos and suffering and who had a tragic end. He took the north star as a guide to liberty, yet in a fitful moment, for fear of betrayal, he took the deadly cup to save himself from bondage by his fellow men.

DOMINE DIRIGE NOS. GEORGE WASHINGTON. Died April 8, 1863.

An honest colored man who lived and died on this mountain. He is buried on the site of his former home. His virtues are related by all who know him.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE. Friend, pause and think of the Brotherhood of God. One may have a few more grains of pigment beneath his skin. Looking into the portals of eternity teaches us that the Brotherhood of Man is inspired by God's word. There all prejudice of race vanishes away.

The story of the two monuments dates to the days of the underground railroad, when escaped slaves were pursued by their southern masters. In 1851 George Washington made his escape from a Virginia plantation and after months of adventure reached the spot where the monuments stand. Choosing to live in freedom here in the mountain fastnesses, he built for himself a rude hut and lived the life of a hermit for a period of 12 years. Gray and bent with years, he finally passed away to his reward, alone, as he had lived. After many days the body was found in a kneeling position under a giant pine overlooking the valley.

The elements of deeper tragedy enter into the story of the unknown. Four years after Washington had taken up his abode on the mountain the unknown, also a fugitive slave, reached the spot in safety and found shelter in the hermit's hut. For two years they lived together in peace and safety, but one day word reached the unknown that the agents of his former master were on his track and were but a few miles distant. Choosing death rather than a return to slavery or the betrayal of his friend's hiding place, the unknown stole away amid the rocks and there died by his own hand.

A few years ago the remains of the two slaves were buried side by side, close by their cabin, and a funeral service was held in the presence of a large number of people. The monuments were erected by the colored people of the state shortly afterward.—New York Sun.

COLUMBUS A PIRATE.

Frank R. Stockton Says the Discoverer Disobeyed Queen Isabella's Orders.

Frank R. Stockton, in his story, "The Buccaneers of Our Coast," in St. Nicholas, says:

It is not necessary for us to enter very deeply into the consideration of the policy of Columbus toward the people of the islands of the West Indies. His second voyage was nothing more than an expedition for the sake of plunder. He had discovered gold and other riches in the West Indies, and he had found that the people who inhabited the islands were simple hearted, inoffensive creatures who did not know how to fight and who did not want to fight. Therefore, as it was so easy to sail his ships into the harbors of the defenseless islands, to subjugate the natives and to take away the products of their mines and soil, he commenced a veritable course of piracy.

The acquisition of gold and all sorts of plunder seemed to be the sole object of this Spanish expedition, and natives were enslaved and subjected to the greatest hardships, so that they died in great numbers. At one time 300 of them were sent as slaves to Spain. A pack of bloodhounds, which Columbus had brought with him for the purpose, was used to hunt down the poor Indians when they endeavored to escape from the hands of the oppressors, and in every way the island of Hayti, the principal scene of the actions of Columbus, was treated as if its inhabitants had committed a dreadful crime by being in possession of the wealth which the Spaniards desired for themselves.

Queen Isabella was greatly opposed to these cruel and unjust proceedings. She sent back to their native land the slaves which Columbus had shipped to Spain, and she gave positive orders that no more of the inhabitants were to be enslaved and that they were all to be treated with moderation and kindness. But the Atlantic is a wide ocean, and Columbus, far away from his royal patron, paid little attention to her wishes and commands, and without going further into the history of this period, we will simply mention the fact that it was on account of his alleged atrocities that Columbus was superseded in his command and sent back in chains to Spain.

Wasted Kindness. Three young women were standing on the curb at the corner of Euclid Avenue and Erie Street, peering down the avenue with anxious faces. A respectable looking young man noticed their anxiety and approached them.

"Are you waiting for a car?" he asked. The girls looked up in astonishment. Then they glanced at one another.

"Ye-es," said the tallest one. "Well," said the young man, "the cars do not come up the street because of the sewer excavation. You will have to go to the corner of Prospect and Erie." And he passed on.

"Did you ever?" a bystander heard one of the girls say. "Wasn't that cheek?"

"Wonder what he takes us for?" inquired another.

"Guess he thought we'd walk with him," said the third.

"Well, he ain't smart enough to fool us," said the first speaker.

And they continued to stand on the curb and peer down the street.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DO YOU WANT CONSUMPTION?

Are you really looking for it? Inviting it? Then pay no attention to your hacking cough, and your weak throat. You can prevent it, though. Take Scott's Emulsion early, when the cough first begins.

A SIGHT TO BEHOLD.

Look upward to the azure dome, Where suns and planets are at home And where the clouds at pleasure roam.

Look outward to the billowy sea, Where argosies for you and me Drift rudderless and will not be Directed to some port where we May get their golden cargoes free.

Look upward to the mountain top, From which an avalanche may drop.

Look down the street a mile or so, Where people come and people go In such a tossing that they seem The floatsman of a swollen stream.

Look into windows where the gold And jewels of the new and old Are set in glittering array For those who have the cash to pay.

Look at some passing carriage which May make you wish that you were rich.

Look anywhere—that is to say, Look anywhere except her way— For, lo, here comes what we'd conceal, A dumpy woman on a wheel!

And did you ever? Oh, me! Oh, my! —New York Sun.

Lincoln's Berth. In the early days of sleeping cars two men slept in one berth. One day a tall lanky man engaged a berth from Pullman Pullman handed him the check and said "I shall sell the other check to that berth to another man, of course." The lanky man wound himself up to his full height, then unwound himself again. "Young man," he said, "the person who can get into one of your berths when I am wound up in it is welcome to the accommodation." This man was Abraham Lincoln.—New York Tribune.

Outdoor Exercise. Muldoon, the trainer and athlete, advises the same physical exercise for women as for men. "Outdoor exercise," he says, "will preserve their beauty, bring health and improve the temper." He suggests good, long brisk walks, work with the dumbbells, jumping rope and playing ball. Of course all these exercises must be taken in proper costume, which should consist of loose fitting garments that will not interfere with any part of the body and will allow free action of all the muscles.

Literary Continuity. "Write more connected stories," snarled the city editor to his new reporter. And the next day the reporter handed in his copy all pasted together.—Detroit Free Press.

Cyclometers are in use in cats in Berlin, Leipzig and Dresden. They record the exact amount of miles traveled and the total fare of the occupants.

Sorting Sawed Lumber. "The Story of a Pine Board" is one of the articles in St. Nicholas. Mr. W. S. Harwood, who writes it, tells of the growth of the tree, the felling of it by lumbermen, its passage to the mill and the cutting into boards. Then he says: A system of rollers carries the sawed lumber and the slabs from the saws to the distant end of the mill, where the boards are trimmed and sorted. The rollers are revolving cylinders of steel, raised just enough from the tables in which they are set to keep the lumber in motion. Standing at the end of the roller carriage, a blue bloused workman with his sharp pickaxe directs the board in any direction he wishes, the rough slabs being sent along one set of subordinate rollers to be shaved up into shingles or ripped into kindling for city consumption, while the boards pass up a broad, inclined table, where whizzing little saws trim them and saw them into the requisite lengths. In a high cage near the top of the room a workman operates a series of levers like those in use in a railway switchyard, directing the pieces of lumber as they pass up the incline. The lumber then tumbles down the other side of the incline and is ready for piling.

THE LIQUOR AND DRUG HABIT. I guarantee to every victim of the liquor or drug habit, no matter how bad the case, that when my vegetable medicine is taken as directed, all desire for liquor or drugs is removed within three days, and a permanent cure effected in three weeks. The medicine is taken privately and without interfering with business duties. Immediate results—normal appetite, sleep and clear brain, and health improved in every way. Indisputable testimony sent sealed. I invite strict investigation. Address Mr. A. Hutton Dixon, No. 40 Park Avenue Montreal.

A DOG THAT OWNS JORKINS.

The Canine Is Tyrannical and Mrs. Jorkins is the Sufferer.

Jorkins owns a dog, or, to be more explicit, the dog owns Jorkins, and they both live with Mrs. Jorkins in a flat, much to the discomfort of that good woman, who does not as a general thing tolerate dogs.

"Piper has more sense than most people," Jorkins says when expatiating on the virtues of his favorite.

"Yes," Mrs. Jorkins adds, sarcastically, "he knows enough to come in when it rains, because he hates to get wet."

Piper is a dog of parts—part terrier, with a strain of bird dog and a dash of water spaniel. He dislikes to get his feet wet and is afraid of a gun. He seldom barks at night and would wag his tail at sight of a burglar and accompany him through the house noiselessly. He has one accomplishment, and one only. He goes down three flights of flat stairs every morning to bring up the daily paper, which Mrs. Jorkins gets from him by strategy in the course of the day after he has chewed it to pulp.

Jorkins had often intimated to Mrs. J. that it was no trouble to bring up a canine hybrid by hand and believes that now, when he is brought up and they can neither sell, lose him or give him away, that her ministrations should continue, and that if she cannot go out and take Piper with her it is her duty to stay at home.

The other day Mrs. Jorkins struck. She had often threatened to, and on one occasion had struck—the dog. She now refused to attend to Piper's diet another hour. She declared she might as well live in a ricefield as to be eternally cooking rice in the flat kitchen for that dog. She said that Piper ate a gallon of boiled rice per diem.

"I'll see him further," she said to the astonished Jorkins, "before I turn myself into a Hindoo, cooking rice for him. Try it yourself and see how you like it."

Jorkins was crushed. He asked meekly where the rice was kept and spent the rest of the day cooking it, while his wife retired with a bad headache. He filled every tub, pan, pad and basin in the flat with boiled rice, the proportions of which appalled him. Hiding as much of it as he could, he took in a steaming mass to give Piper, who had concealed himself under Mrs. Jorkins' lounge.

"You can't give a dog red hot food," said his wife. "You must cool it for him. I always do."

Her husband looked at her with admiration. He was beginning to think her a martyr. He took the rice and the dog into the kitchen, whither Mrs. J. presently followed him. She found him on his knees, with his bicycle pump, hard at work. He was cooling the rice, while Piper sat by and howled.—Chicago Times-Herald.
