

Pollard-Glover Wedding Is Solemnized In London

Gertrude Marie Glover and Kenneth John Pollard exchanged wedding vows before the Rev. O. B. Hoiesen, Saturday afternoon, August 3, 1957, in the chapel of First St. Andrew's United Church, London, Ont. The bride of London is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Glover, White Sands, Prince Edward Island. The groom, also of London, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pollard, Blyth.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law Harry Reynolds.

The bride wore a formal gown of silk organza and ne. over duchess satin, fashioned on princess lines with hip-point sleeves and scoop neckline edged with lace in medallion motif, seed pearls and sequins, her fingertip veil of silk illusion, and she carried a cascade of white gardenias and Stephanotis.

Sister of the groom, Miss Beryl Pollard, was maid of honor, with Mrs. Seaman Glover as bridesmaid, wearing gowns of crystal-ette in shades of turquoise and pastel yellow.

Groomsman was Robert Pollard, brother of the groom. William Pollard, also a brother of the groom, and Seaman Glover, brother of the bride, were ushers.

For traveling to Prince Edward Island, the bride donned a navy blue sheath dress with white accessories. The couple will make their home in London.

Wash Boiler Useful On Barbecue Grill

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"What is so amusing, madame?" inquired the chef.

"This picture in today's newspaper," I replied. "See, it's a regular old-fashioned copper-bottomed wash boiler. Why, it's the same kind used for boiling the clothes in the days before washing machines. Only this wash boiler is copper-finished on the outside and equipped with a wire rack. But the cost is sky high."

"May I see, madame? Ah out," mused the chef. Plus ça change plus c'est la meme chose. — the more it changes the more it is the same thing."

"I suggest that our readers search through the attic and basement, bring out the old wash boiler and fix up a wire rack for it. Then use it on the barbecue grill to boil corn a la mode — my newest invention."

Corn a la mode: 2 doz. medium ears; Add 1 tsp. liquid garlic juice, 1 tsp. sugar, 1 tsp. vinegar and ½ tsp. Tabasco to 3 qts. boiling water. Add 2 doz. ears husked green corn. Boil 5 min. Serve brushed with butter.

Tomorrow's dinner: Mixed vegetable rice soup, jellied salmon loaf, cucumber cream sauce, potato chips parmesan, corn on cob, compote of fresh fruits, hot or feed coffee or tea, milk. All measurements are level; recipes proportioned to serve 4 to 6.

Jellied salmon loaf: In a saucepan, mix together 1 envelope unflavored gelatin, 1 tsp. sugar, 1 (1-in.) stick cinnamon and ¾ tsp. salt. Stir in ¼ c. each cold water and vinegar.

Stir-cook over a low heat until the gelatin dissolves.

Remove, stir in 1 tsp. table mustard. Cool.

Add 2 c. flaked canned salmon and 1 c. small-diced celery. Fold in 1-3 c. whipped icy cold evaporated milk.

Rub a 4 c. mold with salad oil. Spoon in the salmon loaf mixture. Refrigerate 4 hrs., or until firm.

Unmold. Garnish with sliced tomatoes and salad greens. Pass cucumber cream sauce.

Cucumber cream sauce: Select a tender young cucumber. Peel, wash and dry. Chop fine.

Add 1 tsp. salt, 2 shakes Tabasco, 1 tsp. minced dill and 1 tsp. vinegar. Chill.

Serve combined with 1-3 c. icy cold whipped evaporated milk or ½ c. dairy sour cream.

Compote of fresh fruits: Combine 1-3 c. light brown sugar and 1 c. water; boil 5 min.

Peel and slice 2 tart cooking apples. Add to the syrup; cook 3 min.

Then add 3 sliced peeled good-size peaches, and 4 not-pitted red plums, halved and pits re-

MARY HAWORTH

Divorcee Is Very Lonesome

Dear Mary Haworth: I was divorced about 18 months ago and in one sense I haven't been able to find happiness since.

I have attained more peace of mind in this time, having had to face facts, and face myself, due to sheer necessity. But I have missed the warm companionship of marriage—which in my case lasted only three years.

I didn't want divorce, but was told if I didn't take action, he would be married again. I hear: and he had been married before, prior to marrying me.

My problem is—I don't know where to go from here. I should be making new contacts, but don't seem able to establish any further close relationships. In fact—and this may be hard to understand—I haven't had a date with a man since my divorce. I have tried—have gone to social clubs, been active in church work and endeavored to use my business contacts—with no results.

I have made an adjustment of sorts to my situation; but increasing loneliness is creeping up on me. Having gone to a psychiatrist for several years, I think I have probably worked out some emotional problems. But this dilemma seems of a more practical nature—one that I can't fathom.

I hope my statement of the case isn't too incoherent; and that you can provide some insight into the matter. Thank you for any advice.

B.A.

GOING IN CIRCLES

Dear B.A.: Somehow your story brings to mind the saying: "A rolling stone gathers no moss." Perhaps the reminder is sparked by your statement: "My problem is—I don't know where to go from here." Of course I realize you were speaking figuratively; but there may be an element of literalness in the "go," in the image of being "on the go."

A satisfactory life isn't achieved in terms of pursuing happiness; or chasing contacts and trying to take profit from them. Or trying to arrange a new set of circumstances, a new and different social status, and so on.

Rather, a worthwhile life consists in having roots in relevant relationships; and in growing, unfolding, becoming "a real person" with reference to the self you are, essentially. It is a matter of fledging out, in a more or less consistent framework of experience—to which additions may be made, from time to time.

FENDS AGAINST PAST

A satisfactory life is never a case of skittering about the landscape of the human scene, trying to latch on to "a good thing."

As of now, it appears that you are a loner in life—cut off from social roots in your present situation. By which I mean, you aren't associated, on a residential or visiting basis, with either family or friends or kissing kin in this vicinity—as a woman might be, who was a native of the community, with a happy heritage.

The fact that you are an outsider socially, with no "in" anywhere on the score of emotional security, and that your habitual loneliness is getting worse, and that you've had psychiatric help for several years, suggests that your early life was disadvantageous to your development—to put it mildly.

FRIEND TO ALL

Thus, your unhappy present is probably only a continuation of your equally (or more unhappy) past history. So what to do? Well recognize that you are at grips with the proposition of making a life for yourself, as best you can. And begin precisely where you are, being a thoughtful, helpful, non-self-seeking person, in relation to any and all who cross your path. This is "a good thing."

Also, use your leisure to learn the techniques and power of prayer. To start, you might read Emmet Fox's brochure Stake Your Claim (Harpers).

Corporal Walsh And Bride Wed At St. Anthony's

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Anthony's R.C. Church, on August 19th, when Grace Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. Rose McKenna and the late Edward McKenna, became the bride of Corporal John Robert Walsh of Brae Parish.

The youthful bride, given in marriage by her brother, Edward of Rumford, Me., was beautifully gowned in white net over taffeta. Her headress was a pearl tiara from which fell a silk embroidered finger tip veil. She carried a pearl rosary and American Beauty roses.

The bride was attended by her sister Barbara, who wore a gown of heavenly blue net over taffeta and carried pink carnations. The groom was ably supported by his brother Sherman. After the ceremony the wedding party breakfasted at the home of the bride where the guests of honor, Rev. Father Piore and Rev. Father Dooley of Brae Parish extended congratulations and good wishes to the young couple.

In the evening friends and neighbors gathered at the bride's home, where a delicious supper was served and a three tiered wedding cake, baked by a friend of the bride, was cut in the traditional manner. Afterwards the bride donned a blue suit with white accessories and the happy couple left on a honeymoon visit to several places of interest in the Maritimes before going to Petawawa where the groom is stationed in the Canadian Army.

WESTMORELAND W.I.
