ELLEN'S DIARY

Surprises In Springtime

"I could scarcely believe my eyes" Granddaughter came in all smiles and somewhat excited this afternoon to tell of a miracle of the season. "But there they were a mother-ewe and her three little lambs! And to think that I was the one to find them!"

"We'll be keeping them, Dad says" Mack commented, the fact making up for any disappointment occasioned him in not being first to the scene. "Three more ewes, that should build up the flock."

"They live," Granddaughter offered practically. "Live? Of course they will I believe" his eyes were serious, "by the look of them they came to live. Things do, you know that's what Granddaddy says. But sometimes they come to die. And no matter what you do for them-well, he shook his head, "It's just no use."

"It's great to live on a farm in the springtime," Granddaughter said to her mother this evening. "It's good at any time of the year, but in the spring, there are so many surprises to enjoy. There's hardly a day now that we don't find something new: a calf, or little pig, or lambs, all different and pretty. In this way, town-children are to be pitied, aren't they? Oh, they have other nice things to see and do and places to go but there's something very sweet in seeing little new-born things. Kittens by their mother in a warm nest of straw are the sweetest sight of all. And "she remembered something else." So are the wee bunnies that Gage's rabbits have now, small and soft-furred and cute. Yes, it is nice on a farm in the springtime."

AND TONIGHT WITH another week made up of the "little things" of the farming the sights and scenes and the chorings of our occupation, about lived and gone, again we rest, for the most part, our duties for Sunday.

"The season of trout opens this year on Sunday," Granddaughter said, noting it on the calendar with some dismay. "It's just no use thinking about it at all," she commented. "We can't go fishing that day."

"Huh!" Mack settled the question with a broad smile. "They won't bite anyway...not if it's on a Sunday!"

And with April speeding by, we talk of "this backward weather." The farmers speak of "this late spring" and with all the snow marked recently. "Everything's so different nowadays...they make different bombs, and send test-rockets unbelievable distances; they break sound-barriers and make fast and faster planes and machines; they attempt to make contact with the inhabitants of other planets, fairly sure there are such folks, until life is all mixed up and bewildering. And somewhat frightening."

Yet it is written and sealed in the mark of a rainbow. "The Lord said...I will not curse the ground any more for man's sake; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done...While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

The seedtime will dawn. One day the resting fields will awaken to the sound of machines. And in time James will hitch the team in the old seeder as he has all down the years; and go to the sowing in the fields he loves best. And at Alderlea and on every farm, I-land-over, folks will go happily about their seasonal work remembering, it may be, that "They also minister to Christ. And render noble duty. Whose hands touch life's common rounds To fragrance and to beauty." Until Monday --- --- Diary --- Good-night.

Colorful Stripes Found In Men's New Fashions

Chief feature of the new spring styles for men appears to be a matter of upkeep, since there is an increasing use of easy-to-care-for fabrics. Next, though it may sound like a contradiction in terms, these fashions manage to stay fairly conservative, while using lots of color. So actually one can report that the new shirts, ties, linings, dinner clothes and beachwear are more colorful than ever, yet more restrained.

Whether it's a shirt, a tie, a robe or a jacket, it's apt to be striped, not loud stripes, but stripes just the same. Even the striped sleeve is back in summer dinner jackets. Chest stripes and several inches wide are very new-looking in sport shirts. One such shirt even features a Paris street scene across the chest.

HIGH-STYLE PRINTS
Cotton corduroys are taking to high-style prints and linings for warm weather sports jackets. Now their print and stripe effects from the palettes or foulards of ties.

This trend to color and design doesn't necessarily put any extra laundry burdens on wives and mothers. For manufacturers of all types of men's clothing are extremely conscious of the family washing machine. They want to make things easy for everybody. WATCH TEMPERATURES

But it does behoove the home-maker to watch her water temperatures, drying temperatures and machine timing. For even a fast color can be paled out of existence by suds and rinses that are too hot. And hot drying temperatures aren't recommended for synthetic fibers of which many fabrics are made.

Even though manufacturers are all aiming at safely washable garments, it's still the customer's responsibility to look at labels and guarantees of washability or inquire specifically whether a garment will wash safely before buying.

Since men aren't as familiar with the word of washables as women are, it will do no harm to educate them. Stress the importance of making sure that the polka dots, stripes, plaids, and various prints that intrigue them can go safely into the washing machine. If men, too, demand better labelling of garments and fabrics, real progress in that line will be assured.

WED IN TORONTO

Mr. and Mrs. James Harold Warren are shown after their wedding at Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto. The wedding took place March 22 at 7 in the evening.

The bride is Barbara Anne Erskine, daughter of Mrs. M.B. Pearson. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Warren, Charlottetown. They will live in Toronto.

Mrs. Frank Daley, Summer St., entertained at bridge on Tuesday evening.

F.L. and Mrs. Norman Smith, and children, Virginia and Hugh, of Southampton, England, have returned to Canada and are spending a holiday with Mrs. Smith's mother, Mrs. Donald Baker, Summerside.

Mrs. J. LeRoy Holman, Summer Street, was hostess to the "East End" bridge club on Monday evening.

The Nursery Club of the Kings County Hospital held a very successful white elephant sale on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Roland Diamond. The bidding was brisk and a good sum realized on the articles auctioned. There were a number of invited guests, as well as club members, who helped to make the project a success.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Diamond, assisted by Mrs. Roy Gillis, Mrs. Beecher Hickox, Mrs. John Tredecker and Mrs. Don Wannamaker.

LET'S EAT

Dinner Favorites From New Orleans

By Ida Bailey Allen

The quiet of the famous 1840 room at Antoine's world-famous restaurant in New Orleans was a perfect setting for a perfect luncheon.

"As you and M. le Chef are going at such a fast pace, my wife and I thought you would find this private room restful," remarked our host, Mr. Solis Sieferth, distinguished Louisiana architect and historian.

DIGNIFIED FOUNDER
It was very restful indeed. The portrait of the dignified founder of Antoine's hanging on the wall, the old-time fireplace, the antique duck presses, the spaciousness of the table, the beautiful white linen tablecloth—all helped to create a real haven in the midst of culinary extravagance.

The food was delectable. Here is a guest menu based on several of the dishes we enjoyed that you can prepare at home.

TOMORROW'S DINNER
Avocado-Lettuce Salad
Shrimp Bisque (Frozen)
Eggs Sardou
