of the British Commonwealth overseas will open coronation week June 1. This will be followed by a luncheon for Prime Ministers and Commonwealth representatives. Tuesday, the Queen will receive her crown from the Archbishop of Canterbury at Westminster Abbey. Later she will broadcast a message to the world. Two state banquets follow on Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Foreign envoys and deputations will be received by the Queen Friday, June 5. That evening the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will give a dinner for the Queen.

The state visitors of royal and official guests end Saturday, June 6, when the historic race meet, the Derby, will be held. It is not yet known whether the Queen will be at the Derby.

The week following the coronation will be a crowded one. Monday, June 8, the Queen and Duke attend a performance at the royal opera house, Covent Garden; Tuesday a service at St. Paul's Cathedral, and Thursday will be the Queen's official birthday with the ceremony of trooping the color.

The week also includes another Government reception and on Wednesday—the Duke's 32nd birthday—the opening of the annual royal tournament, a show staged by the armed services. Friday there will be a state banquet or evening reception at Buckingham Palace.

Then will follow visits to the Royal Borough Windsor, Royal Ascot race meeting, Scotland Northern Ireland and Wales. A garden party at the Palace July 23 ends the provisional program.

EKE OUT

one out, Cannon's fly to left sent Dalton scampering home with the second tally after the catch. In the third Grant Grady walked, and Whalen singled to left, the fleet-footed Grady going all the way to the hot corner. Coke Grady's double through the centre brought both boys home. Squares brags and whalen did a fine pitching chore for five and two-third innings. He gave up five hits but kept them well scattered, bearing down with runners on the sacks, and keeping the home team from further scoring.

As the seventh inning came up it was obvious Simmons was trying. After Cannon had knocked down a hard smash to outrun Lewis to the initial sack, MacLeod tripled and raced home when Coke Grady dropped the relay from centre field. Coyle doubled to left and Ready's single to right brought the big fellow home making the score 4-2 in the home-stay. Simmons managed to get the side out in order in the eighth, but Lewis sent a tricky hopper between first and second and crossed the bag while Cannon's Whalen and Simmons were all trying to do something about the bounce. Lewis stole second, and was advanced to third when MacLeod grounded out to Whalen. Coyle rolled one to shortstop Grady who elected to give up the run and throw Coyle out at first. The throw was a bit high but Cannon leaped into the air at the same time as Coyle was making his last hop to the base and tagged the clean-up Abbie before he hit the base. It was a lightning fast play on Maurie's part, but the Abbies disputed Landry's decision vehemently, claiming Coyle had not been touched. Charlie Kennedy grounded out to second to end the game 4-3.

The contest saw some very fine defensive play, with the Abbies playing errorless ball, and Coke Grady having the only C & B error, a miscue which allowed MacLeod to score on a triple, but which didn't matter after all because Coyle came through with a double that would have scored Burke in any case. All runs were earned. Simmons allowed only four hits and C & B banged out nine safeties off the slants of Burke and Squaresbriggs. Forbes Kennedy's bare-handed catch against the wire of a foul fly by Purcell in the fifth, and Coke Grady's glove-hand snafu of Burke's slip for a hit in the sixth were the best of a number of fine fielding efforts.

The R.C.A.F. Royals won a close exhibition tilt from the Holman aggregation Thursday evening. 4-3 was the final score, and the game was sprinkled with ribbaws as was the last encounter on the airforce diamond. Joe Hunter seems to have a lot of trouble with the boys. An irate batter threatened to take a punch at him after he had called a strike which the batter considered had touched the plate. The count was 3 and 1 at the time and the batter on his way to first came back in a mood for fistfuffs but players grabbed him and the fracas was cut short. Charlie Hogan and Alan Stewart got the heavy-ho out of the game. If this keeps up, what will happen when the boys are playing off for the Island championship, and the chips are really down. There's likely to be a few on the players' shoulders too.

Andy's Aces did the trick at last. They defeated an airforce aggregation of softball players for the first time this season. They did it at a very important time, too. They've knotted up the quarter-final series with the Daks, and forced a third game to decide the winner. Eileen Gibson, wife of an R.C.A.F. man living in town, was a tower of strength to the Aces, and she and Julie Melkie made the best keystone combination we've seen to date. Marie Peters is developing into a good pitcher, too.

There's been a vast improvement in the quality of the girls' play of late. In picking out a few fielding plays that stood out from

S'side Clothing Firm Has New Store Front

Early yesterday morning workmen removed the boards that unveiled a beautiful new store front in the clothing store of M. L. Frank MacKenzie on Water Street in Summerside. This store, having acquired the space formerly used by an adjoining business, is now double its former size. With a green trim front, it has a centre entrance between two large plate glass windows that permit excellent lighting and a clean view of the merchandise displayed in the store.

Workers are still engaged in decorating the interior and it is understood that an official reopening will be held when it is completed, although business is continuing on a modified basis in the meantime.

Associated with his father in the business is his younger son, Ross, who entered the business after completion of four and a half years service with the R.C.A.F.

The eldest son, Kenneth, is a partner in Scotia Furs, Truro. The name of "MacKenzie" has been a family word since the late 18th century when Mr. L. Frank MacKenzie's father, the late John MacKenzie operated a clothing store in which as a tailor he won international recognition in tailoring competitions.

M. L. Frank MacKenzie became associated with his father in the business, and after his father's death, gradually expanded and extended the business successively with men's furnishings, ladies' wear, and made-to-measure clothing. The business which M. L. Frank MacKenzie and his son Ross today conduct has grown so that it is widely known by its motto "The little shop with the big values."—S.

aged to get under them and hold them. It would be quite possible to write columns on each of the fine plays that the boys made. Brian Lewis made several outstanding plays in centrefield in the early innings. Kenny MacDonald made the best catch of his career off Maurice Cannon in the second and he certainly prevented a triple. Johnny Whalen at second base for the Abbies did not tag up at third after the catch was made, which was his game ending pick of Charlie Kennedy's hot grounder in the ninth.

traits at once and by setting certain minimum standards for each characteristic. He thought the system was more flexible and more easily operated and would result in greater emphasis being placed on the factors for which the flock is weakest. Essential Points: In summing up the various things he had mentioned as being desirable in improving flocks he said the minimum needed were: (1) Have 20 breeding pairs, and three to proven and partially proven matings. (2) Select birds for the test matings from at least five sire groups. (3) Collect fertility and hatchability data on the mass mated current entry, preferably before the regular hatching season. (4) See as not to tax the labor and housing facilities of the plant, only save progeny from five non-related females mated with each male. (5) Grow sufficient progeny so that eight full sisters from five relatively non-related dams are available for housing in the fall. Only five of these per dam making up a sire group of 25 daughters need be trapped. The rest can be kept in a separate commercial pen and mortality records kept on them.

Dairy Amalgamation Plans Accepted By Two Companies

In order that definite steps be taken towards amalgamation of dairy concerns in the East Prince area the directors of the Dunk River Dairying Company and Tryon Dairying Company have passed a joint resolution to the effect that they proceed with the amalgamation under arrangements set out in a recommendation drawn up by Mr. W. E. Darby, Q.C., and Mr. T. E. Hickey, C.A.,. This resolution also expresses the hope that other dairy companies considering entering the amalgamation will see fit to come into under this plan.

As previously reported, the site on which the new plant is expected to be located is that formerly occupied by the Pioneer Publishing Company on Water Street West, Summerside.

A great deal of preliminary study and investigation has been carried out by those appointed to look into the feasibility of the project. It was recognized some time ago that many features of the matter would require competent legal advice and that the amalgamation would be required in drawing up a set of arrangements which would be equitable, workable from financial standpoint and sound in principle.

With this in mind Mr. Darby was retained as legal counsel and Mr. Hickey as consulting accountant. In planning the amalgamation of a number of previously independent concerns many things came up which, in some cases, can be quite conflicting. One of these factors has been the form under which the new company should be incorporated. This is not surprising as the old companies are present operating under different acts of incorporation and all of them are well content with their own system.

Form Recommended: The Darby-Hickey report was submitted in due course and contained the following clause recommending the form of incorporation for the new company. "It is recommended that the form of the new organization should be that of a limited liability corporation, limited not only as to liability of the shareholders but also limited in the letters patent as to the dividend earning capacity of the shares. It is suggested that this limit be set at five per cent. Any surplus earnings over and above this amount should be paid to the patron-producers, either in the form of patronage dividends based on the amount of their patronage with the company or by setting up credits to their accounts on the books of the company on the same basis. These may be distributed at the discretion of the company in the form of stock dividends, all of this, of course, after making provision for the indebtedness of the company and the usual and necessary reserves for depreciation, bad debts, debt retirement, and such other reserves as may be decided, it may also be provided, if desirable, that each shareholder may have only one vote."

While incorporation under letters patent containing all the above provisions is some departure from the original acts under which the Dunk River Dairying Company and Tryon Dairying Company have been carrying on their business, it is the opinion of their shareholders and patrons that an organization established under these regulations would adequately safeguard the interests of producers. It will be noted that the profits of the business must go back to the patrons either in cash, credit or stock in the company.

Believed Satisfactory

As stated above, the directors of both companies, actually joining on behalf of their shareholders and patrons, have come to the conclusion that amalgamation under the arrangements outlined in the report is entirely satisfactory and the resolution to go ahead with the business under the form offers a sound proposition to all those considering amalgamation. It is felt that a careful study of the Darby-Hickey report which is in the hands of all directors of all companies will assure everyone that it is admirably suited to the producer-owned corporation, further provisions can be added, if desirable, governing the transfer of shares in order that no individual or group could ever obtain control but this is already well covered by the limiting of dividends to a maximum of five per cent and by limiting the vote to one per shareholder. It would seem probable that this positive action taken by two of the dairy concerns interested in the amalgamation could lead to a full consummation of the project in the near future and, eventually, to the great benefit of the dairy industry generally in the western part of the Province.—S.

Other interesting discussions by those present included a look at the present position and outlook of the R.O.P. policy. It was later said by local officials that this is the only Maritime Province with a record of 100 per cent R.O.P. sires. Talks were also given on advertising, improved types of brooder houses, breeding for egg quality and the number of reports kept by breeders.

One long discussion centred around the production of lighter weight birds for market purposes with some speakers feeling the market trend at present was to this type rather than the heavy birds as in the past. However, Mr. Ray said he did not agree that poultrymen in this Province could produce broilers at present prices. The discussion started when Mr. L. Griesbach, Fredericton, spoke on breeding birds for meat production.

Other speakers were G. R. Wilson, Chief of Poultry Production in the Dominion Department of Agriculture, who told of the need for breeding schools, F. M. Nash, District Director of Poultry Services, Russell Eagles, breeder from Gaspareaux, N.S., Leslie Wood, New Brunswick Department of Agriculture, B. Frank Timney, of the local Experimental Farm, E.
