The Superior Kinds Are Used In China and Not Exported.

An interesting account of the manufacture of the so called Indian ink, which is made only in the Anhui province of China.

The materials with which this beautiful black ink is made are sea-shell or coals, or the oil expressed from the poisonous seeds of a tree extensively cultivated in the Yang-tse valley.

The materials thus prepared are molded in molds of carved wood and dried, which takes about 20 days in fine weather, and adorned with Chinese characters in gilding.

INDIA NEWSPAPERS.

Daily and Weekly Publications Flourish There Before the European Conquest.

India can justly claim to have a share—a very considerable share—in the birth of the newspaper.

The Indian press may be roughly divided into three classes. The first consists of English newspapers published in the large cities, such as Calcutta and Bombay.

The oriental is fond of parade, even in language, and the longer the words the more attractive in his eyes and to his ears is the style.

Worn Knees.

Many stories are told of the keen wit and ready speech of Dr. Mason, once pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian church in New York.

He had a great fondness for animals and particularly for horses, of whose good points he was said to be an excellent judge.

Dr. Mason surveyed the horse with long and careful scrutiny, and after several inarticulate sounds of approval and disapproval he finally pointed to the animal's knees, which were decidedly worn in aspect.

"That is a good sign for a minister," said he, with a humorous smile, "but it is a very bad sign for a minister's horse."

Between Rich and Poor In India.

Our standard of civilization is personal comfort—luxury, a thing absolutely unknown in native India.

"The last time I had a vacation," said the cheerful idiot, "I had to double up with a stranger at the hotel, and when I waked up I found that he had walked off with my new suit and left his old one."

HIS MEDICINES CURE.

Whether For Internal or External Use or For Whatever Disease They Are Alike.

There is a local doctor who advertises a good deal on dead walls. To those who know him personally he does not claim to be a remarkable scientist or even the most learned living disciple of Esculapius.

"There is a great deal of fraud in the theory of medicine," he will tell you confidentially. "Now, if I don't cure my patients I never hurt them anyway. I use only one article of medicine in all my practice. I appeal a good deal to the imagination. It's entirely in the mind, you know. If a man thinks he's cured, in nine cases out of ten he is, and that's all about it."

His conscience is sufficiently resilient to allow him to accept fees on this confession of medical faith, and he says he has not had any trouble paying his rent so far.

The other day he had an excitable patient who "imagined" himself the victim of rheumatism and a dozen more awful maladies. After a long and exacting precautionary discourse as to diet and things to do and not to do, he dismissed him with two large bottles of the same stuff. One was for internal use, one to be applied locally. He cautioned him solemnly to be very careful and keep the bottles apart.

The same afternoon the patient came into his office hurriedly, laboring under the greatest excitement. He refused to wait in the anteroom, but said he must see the doctor immediately. The latter was called. When he came, the patient gasped: "Doctor! I've made a terrible mistake! I got that medicine mixed. I've taken the wrong one internally. I feel pretty bad—I suppose it's coming on! For heaven's sake, do something right away for me!"

"Why, of course," said the doctor, and then he reached over and gave him some of the same stuff for an antidote.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Hitting Power of the Ocean.

Landsmen who are slow to realize the tremendous force of the sea had an object lesson ashore in New York city when five large tanks, built to contain 120,000 pounds of soap, but temporarily filled with water, and situated on the fourth floor of a large building, collapsed and completely wrecked the whole structure, killing three men and doing a large amount of damage.

When You Are In a Tunnel.

It is a most curious fact, but the approach of a train in a tunnel may be easily ascertained some seconds before it becomes visible to those traveling toward it in an opposite direction.

Testimonial

C. P. Fletcher, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I do not wish to return to Montreal without expressing my gratitude to you for the very excellent Bell Piano that you placed at my disposal for my recital. I have tried many Canadian Pianos of different manufacturers and must say that, considering the size of the instrument, I have never found one to equal it for depth and brilliancy of tone.

Again thanking you, very sincerely, I remain, Yours, FRED. E. MORRIS
