Lund procure and soon the officer had called yesterday morning to trap a beaver which was traveling along the Western approach of the Hilsenhorn bridge. Sidney Green Jr. first noticed the animal along the rocks at the side of the fill. He contacted the Police station where he was put in touch with Sgt. Lund. The police officer first thought that he was wanted to shoot the animal but he was told, if possible, it would be desirable to take the beaver alive. Armed with a crocheted stick used in catching dogs, Sgt. Lund started for the bridge. The beaver by this time was trundling along the road. The dog catching apparatus was proved to be unsatisfactory for catching beavers with the wily amphibian working his way clear
