BEHRING SEA CLAIMS.

The Counsel for Great Britain Have Prepared Their Argument in the Case.

When the Behring Sea Claims Commission concluded its labors in the west a few months ago, it was decided that it should name a place where the oral argument should be held. In the meantime both the British and American counsel were to exchange and file written arguments.

The counsel for Great Britain have completed the preparation of their argument. It is of a very voluminous character, covering 200 printed pages. It deals minutely with all matters connected with the claims, the introductory remarks alone covering no fewer than thirteen pages. These remarks embrace the assertion of jurisdiction by the United States, the first seizure in 1886, United States statutes, diplomatic correspondence, orders for discontinuance of proceedings and release of vessels and persons, assurance against further seizure, protests against renewed seizures, the questions submitted to the arbitrators, etc. The factum then goes on to deal with the scope of the convention, touches on the effect of the Paris Award, has something to say on the measure of damage, and quotes the law on the subject, gives reasons why Great Britain is entitled to recover for loss of catch, submits that the indemnity should comprise interest calculated at the rate current in British Columbia on the whole amount of the loss or damage from the time such damage was suffered, to the expiration of the six months allowed by the convention for the payment of the amount awarded, deals with the question of whether or not Great Britain's claim is affected by citizens of the United States having an interest in any of the vessels, refers to the effect of domicile or nationality, contends that in the case of each claim there should be allowed a sum sufficient to compensate each member of the crew for personal hardship suffered by him in consequence of the seizure and arrest, this sum being in addition to damages sustained by reason of the breaking up of the voyage. The character and extent of the sealing grounds in Behring Sea is entered into as well as the duration of the sealing season, the method for computing the estimated catch, value of seal skins, special conditions affecting the value of vessels, and then follows a concise statement of the facts relating to each claim. The claims upon which interest is charged at the rate of 7 per cent. from the dates mentioned in the particulars until payment, are twenty-six in number, aggregating a total amount of $857,702.23, exclusive of interest and covering the seizures of 1886, 1887, 1889, 1890 and 1892.

SANDBOX TREES.

The Gigantic Touch Me, Not of the Tropics Have Explosive Fruits.

Everybody is familiar with the "touch me not," the pretty jewel weed that grows along the side of water courses. When its seed pods are ripe, at the slightest touch they will explode, blowing the seeds in your face. The giant among them is the sandbox tree (Hura crepitans), a native of tropical America. Its furrowed fruits are as large as an orange. Cosmos of Paris thus describes this Krupp gun of the vegetable world:

"It is often cultivated as an ornamental tree, both in its native country and in other parts of the globe, notably in certain gardens in the Indies. Its fruit looks on the outside something like a melon; it is formed exactly like that of our native euphorbias, of sections, which at maturity separate violently with so intense a report that it has been compared to the sound of a pistol, throwing its seed to a considerable distance.

"With the fruit a very pretty sand-box can be made by cutting a circular opening in the upper part, extracting the seeds and then covering the opening. The opposite side is perforated with little holes. A sandbox thus made is very difficult to keep, for the time always comes when, aided by the drying process, the sections suddenly split, with a characteristic sound.

"The violent splitting of the fruit of the sablier is explained very simply by a process analogous to that which causes the two halves of a split stick to curl apart and depends upon the unequal extensibility of the elements of the valves, which produces the mechanical effect due to it at the precise moment when the sutures, the lines of least resistance, are opened by the progress of desiccation."
