Happenings Of The Week

April steps aside for May.

Susan, Lady Tweedsmuir, wife of the late Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, still holds the interest of Canadians both in her doings and in her writing. One of her most delightful books is "A Winter Bouquet" which can be enjoyed at all times, including this Spring Time Season Lady Tweedsmuir, who was a Grosvenor, like many of these aristocratic families, have by high taxation been obliged to give up their large places. She has left Elfield Manor at Oxford, which contained the beautiful study in which the great creative imagination and brain of John Buchan used to be at work. Lady Tweedsmuir now has a charming little old house in the High Street of the town of Burford on the Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire borders. The town has a very large and lovely church of which Lady Tweedsmuir has a fine view from her garden. The eldest son is in business and does a great deal of work in the House of Lords where he speaks often. His wife (the Lady Tweedsmuir, M.P.) is Conservative member for South Aberdeen and they have one daughter aged five called after her grandmother, Susan. The second son is in business in London and has seven children. He was in the R. A. F. in India during the war and has written a novel about India called "Kumari" which will be out in the autumn. The daughter, Mrs. Fairfax-Lucy, lives in a beautiful valley in the Cotswolds. She has two children, and she also is a writer. The third son is Correspondent to the London newspaper "The Observer" in Washington. He has three children and is married to a former Canadian, Miss Hope Gilmour of Ottawa. Lady Tweedsmuir is a kindly and gracious woman and has a great love of Canada. She shows pictures and lectures on Canada in many parts of Great Britain.

Her worship Dr. Charlotte Whitton, C.B.E., Mayor of Ottawa, who delivered the Samuel M. Robertson Memorial Lecture at Prince of Wales College returned last Saturday by plane to Ottawa.

A. B. AND MRS. JAMES M. FORBES

The presence of the bride's great-great-grandmother at her wedding is a privilege indeed, but such was the experience of Cephenia Florence Llewellyn of Montague, who had as a wedding guest her great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Ernest Griffin of Albion. The ceremony took place on April 21 at 7:30 p.m. Trinity United Church, Montague, when Cephenia Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Llewellyn, Montague, and A. B. James McLean Forbes, son of Rev. and Mrs. Cecil Forbes of Dorchester, N. B. were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Fraser, assisted by Rev. Cecil Forbes, father of the groom.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with Easter flowers, and during the ceremony the "Wedding March" was played by Mrs. D. M. McDonald. While the register was being signed Mrs. Cecil French sang "I'll Walk Beside You".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin and nylon lace, and a shoulder-length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The bride's attendants were Miss Doris Ramsay as bridesmaid and Miss Wilma Stewart as maid-of-honour.

The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Wilfred Forbes of Dorchester and ushering were Messrs. John Hayter and Darrell Lyle. Flower-girls for the wedding were Sandra Llewellyn and Judy Stewart.

RECEPTION HELD
The reception was held at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ellie Llewellyn, where approximately 100 guests were in attendance.

The Problem Of Sagging Bust

By Ida Jean Kain

With fashion emphasis on the bosom, a common query is: "Can sagging of the bust be corrected when the cause is not faulty posture or excess weight?" In many instances, the answer is yes. But first, it is important to understand about the glands, ligaments and muscles. While the breasts are not composed of muscle, they are held in place by muscles and ligaments. So it follows that proper tone in the supporting tissues is essential to a normal high position of the bust. Proper position depends on the tone of the ligaments reaching up to the collarbone, and on the tone of the pectoral muscles which lie just under the skin and cover the chest. These muscles are attached to the inner part of the shoulder, follow down the whole length of the sternum, and fan out across each side of the chest.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

In the chill of the night which now keeps watch over our valley, there is no music from the pond, except of course that made by the restricted flow of water that drops from the spillways in the dam.

"I'll see!" our philosopher-friend who visited Alderlea this evening offered seriously. "The fields may be dry enough now to cultivate and we have an idea that we're going to have an early spring. But let it turn cold with falling weather for a while and the cropping won't be here too soon! ... Did you notice the new moon tonight-away toward the north? Cold that's what that means. I've often heard the old folks say. It's not too good a sign, and the frost's singing in April—that wasn't an encouraging sign either, just" he nodded "wait and see what the like of that will bring!"

However there was fencing done this afternoon by the three farmers, at "the other farm beyond a Rob's. We watched them go down the lane, tractor and trailer, bearing James and the younger farmer together with the gearing for the endeavour, the children too, their fishing rods and picnic lunch, the black dog following behind.

"They fenced a field for the sheep—the young and older idle ewes that were taken there by trucks this evening and turned to the ranch for pasture thus made. We were not among those of the family who saw or took part in that out-going for in a pleasant surprise we had gone with Granddaughter and grandaunt and-uncle to her, to town to see the cinema-scope, the Scottish "Brigadoon."

Granddaughter much enjoyed it as did we, if as a matter of course, through we love music even the winds' playing on the harps of the trees, we are never much taken up with musical pictures, which is likely one of our misfortunes. However the exquisite setting: the mountains and glens, the streams, the sky, the mist, the trees and blossoming shrubs and heather-clad slopes, the "lone shielings" and picturesque cottages... the pictured flocks of sheep, the stolid "Healan" cattle, the spotted ponies—all this we liked. Liked too the fantasy of the subject—the fanciful village and folks that was "Brigadoon."

"Wouldn't it be nice to do this again some time?" Granddaughter offered with a happy smile as we came away from the theatre... Before long, at the hill-top, where the road dips to the depths of our valley, we saw above mill and meadow, shining out in welcome the lights that spelled "Home."

The week-end! Aye, and the day... So fast those of the Springtime go!

"From dawn to evensong is but a day; The hours so swiftly pass away, And yet I would not have them stay. For night brings home and rest. Be this my prayer, when evening shadows fall, To Him whose love o'er shadows all, In every trial, great and small—'Dear Lord! I've done my best—' Until Monday — — — — — Diary — — — — — Good-night"

Decorative Paintings

By ELEANOR ROSS
No matter what decorating scheme is the current favorite, one decorator or another is always doing a room around a picture, and a very attractive affair it usually is, too.

Van Gogh Colors
With the aid of a colorful picture such as Van Gogh or even just a beautiful flower painting, an entire color scheme can be built that will delight the eye. For example, Van Gogh's "Vegetable Garden" immediately brings a charming scheme to mind. The soft, yellowish greens suggest the wall color; the terra cotta tones are ideal for upholstery and the touches of lacquer red suggest accessories.

Even if a picture isn't selected for its color suggestions, a picture can be the dominant, the most beautiful thing in a room, carrying off its role with great success.

As for choosing a painting, many people feel they do not have enough knowledge of art to select an original painting or water color for themselves and so confine their art "collection" to reproductions. There is nothing wrong with this, except that they miss the fun of discovering a picture on their own, choosing it because it has personal appeal, rather than because art authorities have pronounced it good.

Some folks cannot even tolerate the idea of paying real money for a painting. They'll spend it for a sofa, a chest, or other furniture, but not for a picture. Fortunately, all folks don't think this way because art galleries are doing a good business.

Tasty Ham Croquettes Favorite YWCA Dish

By Ida Bailey Allen
The bumper crop of babies born in recent years has made the problems of free time for young mothers acute, so YWCA centers have stepped into the breach and instituted "Mother's Day Out." Nurseries take care of tots while their mothers attend classes in dancing, reducing, nutrition, cooking, entertaining, child care, ceramics, military, good grooming or whatever interests them most. All at nominal cost.

Break in Routine
Lunch in the YWCA cafeteria is a visiting time. Young mothers who feel the constant confinement of a life surrounded by babies, more than 3,000,000 young women members use the many facilities of the YWCA in cities, towns, villages and on college campuses. The Young Women's Christian Association marches on.

Ham Croquettes Piquant: Melt 1/2 lb. butter, add 1/2 lb. ham, 1/2 lb. flour, 1/2 tsp. salt

HAM CROQUETTES taste even better when served with a special sauce. It's white sauce that's flavoured with mayonnaise and tabasco. 1 1/2 c. milk, Add 1 lbs. ham, 1/2 cup parsley and 1/2 onion. Measure out 1 c. Save the remaining sauce to use with the croquette mixture. Stir in 2 c. ground cooked ham, and 1 c. small soft bread cubes. Refrigerate 1 hr. Shape into 6 croquettes. Roll in fine dry bread crumbs, then in egg lightly beaten with 1/2 c. water; and in dry crumbs again. Fry 2 min., or until golden brown, in deep fat at 390 degrees F. Drain on paper towels. Piquant sauce.

PIQUANT SAUCE FROM THE CHEF

Started in Basement
I started in a small basement classroom with 10 pupils. Soon these classes were overflowing. I asked for more space, a whole floor in the building. The committee thought this was over-ambitious but nevertheless granted my request. Worcester merchants furnished the kitchen and dining equipment. Within a year 1,000 pupils were enrolled!
