Churchill Falls Construction Expected To Start In 45 Days

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction crews are expected to move into the Labrador site of the Churchill Falls power project within 45 days, the chairman and president of the British Newfoundland Corp. said here.

Henry Borden told a news conference first work will involve setting up construction camps and completing an access road to the site of the projected powerhouse.

"This work will continue throughout the winter in order to have the site ready for commencement of full construction activities in 1967," said Mr. Borden, who also is chairman and chief executive officer of the Brinco subsidiary in charge of construction, the Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp.

"It is forecast that the estimated peak number of people on the site — approximately 7,0000—will be reached in two to three years."

BULK TO QUEBEC

With completion of the plant, an estimated 32,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity will be delivered annually from Churchill Falls the bulk of Hydro-Quebec.

A general agreement covering the purchase by the publicly - owned Quebec electric utility was signed Thursday.

Mr. Borden said it will take about five years to bring the project, "including associated transmission," to the production stage. Another two years will be needed before all units are installed.

Jean-Claude Lessard, president of Hydro-Quebec, said the Churchill Falls company has undertaken to deliver the Labrador power through Hydro-Quebec's transmission network.

"Present plans envisage the construction of three 735-000-volt lines. . . . If studies now under way should prove the superiority of direct current power transmission, however, Hydro-Quebec will be free to change its plans accordingly."

Studies are in progress "on the respective merits of direct and alternating current power transmission.

Robert Boyd, Hydro's general manager said preliminary work on transmission line construction should be starting next year.

Most would be done in the years 1968-70.

Donald McParland, president and general manager of the Churchill Falls company, said 25 per cent of the $700,000,000 in construction costs will result from labor on the site.

Persons indirectly employed as a result of the project might reach about 15,000 at the peak period.

About 50 per cent of expenditures would be services and the remaining 25 per cent of the sum would be spent on purchases and procurements.

The finished Churchill Falls power installation will not resemble such installations as the Aswan Dam in Egypt.

Rather it would consist of a network of dikes upriver from the falls, designed to bring down the biggest flood of water possible from the assortment of rivers and lakes in the area.

Lack Of Money Is Problem In Carrying Out NATO Plans

By JAMES F. KING

LONDON (AP)—Defence Secretary Denl Healey said here money is the trouble in trying to carry out the military strategy set down by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He made with this observation as Prime Minister Wilson looked to Washington for a way to enable Britain to cut its forces in West Germany as Bonn refused to foot the bill.

There's talk of a plan for blanket cuts in the European forces of the United States-Britain and several smaller NATO countries to head off a premature withdrawal of some British troops on the Rhine.

Healey, in a recorded television program:

"The most dangerous thing is the situation we have lived in for several years in which the strategy, which NATO is supposed to follow in a crisis, assumes that there are twice as many forces available to NATO as is actually the case.

"When we hear these requests for very, very much larger forces in Europe and each of the governments represented round the table says it supports these goals, I have asked the finance ministers present whether they are prepared to pay for the forces which their colleagues said ought to be provided—and the answer is always no."

WOULD LEAD TO WAR

The British defence chief said the Soviets "recognize that a deliberate attack on Western Europe at any level carries with it a grave risk of general nuclear war."

"Therefore, they are likely to avoid actions which imply a deliberate aggression against the West, so long as NATO remains politically a solid alliance and behind the whole of the NATO alliance."

The proposal for blanket cuts in NATO forces is expected to be considered when the three-power talks among the United States- Britain and West Germany open in Bonn Thursday.

Reports depict President Johnson as worried that the threatened British withdrawal would further damage the NATO alliance and lead to domestic pressure on him for major slashes in American forces.

The plan being devised would present a united front on cuts which could be linked with Washington overtures to Moscow for a gradual reduction of forces by both East and West.

RED TRY BLUNTED

WASHINGTON (AP)— Defence Secretary McNamara returned Thursday from what he termed "a very productive visit" to South Viet Nam and declared U.S. forces have blunted a Communist monsoon effort to cut the Southeast Asian country in two. He said the enemy suffered heavy casualties in the unsuccessful drive.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Perhaps the biggest thrill there is in bridge comes from bidding and making a grand slam, and perhaps the biggest disappointment in bridge comes from going down in a grand slam you could have made.

For example, look at this deal where declarer may be the hero or the goat, depending on how he elects to play the hand.

South opens with a forcing two bid. For practical purposes he has game in his hand and wants to make sure it is reached. When North bids three hearts, South has every right to think in terms of a small slam, at least, and the possibility of making a grand slam.

He investigates the possibility by bidding three spades. Then, reasonably enough, he undertakes the grand slam when North voluntarily shows the ace of clubs.

When dummy comes down, South sees that he is in an excellent contract. The only possible fly in the ointment is that one opponent may have all the missing clubs. There being no other conceivable danger, all of South's thoughts converge on protecting against a 4-0 club break in either defender's hand.

After ruffing the diamond lead he cashes the A- K of trumps and then takes his three top spades, discarding a club from dummy.

In the process he learns that West started with precisely two hearts and at least three spades. He also knows from the bidding that West has a minimum of five diamonds, and it therefore follows that West cannot possibly have four clubs.

Accordingly, to guard against the chance of East's having four clubs, South leads a low club to the ace. When West shows out it becomes an easy matter for declarer to pick up East's clubs without loss.

But note that if South thoughtlessly starts the clubs by first leading the king from his hand, he eventually loses a club trick and goes down.
