From Yesterday's 5 o'clock Edition.

LONDON, May 23.—The Vienna correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says:—“Confirmation is given in well informed quarters in Vienna to the rumor that the friendly advances made by England to Japan have already attained a tangible result.

It is believed that an Anglo-Japanese understanding has been reached which not only comprehends all eventualities which can occur in the east, but also contemplates all consequences that might result in the course of the Hispano-American war. The understanding establishes a sort of Asiatic balance of power.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—It is remarked by the Mail and Empire that during the last ten months the United States exported domestic products expending a billion dollars in value. This is the first time that ever the export trade of the country reached such a magnitude in that part of the fiscal year. During the same period the imports amounted to less than half the exports. Evidently protection is making Uncle Sam rich.

—Mail and Empire: So far Uncle Sam has no progress to report in regard to the specific task he undertook—the rejection of Spain from Cuba. Though Cuba is next door to him, he has not been able to land supplies there; he has not been able to turn the insurgents to effective account; he has not reduced Havana or any other important fortification; he has not succeeded in cutting off the island from communication or supplies from the outside. The defences on the island are now supplemented by the Spanish fleet, which he seems chary of tackling on the high seas. It is a fleet that he cannot fight until he has made a prisoner of it.

Mr Gladstone's death, it is remarked by the Mail and Empire, was scarce ly death itself. It was a passing away. There is horror and sorrow when a brilliant career is suddenly but short. But in the case of a man who has lived a long, active and useful life, and who, in the fullness of years, and surrounded by his family, lies down in perfect happiness and in perfect peace to sleep the long sleep, death seems to be a natural and welcome release. It can readily be understood that Mr. Gladstone, pure and good man that he was, so regarded it. He died much as Tennyson did. No doubt he felt as the poet did when, looking forward to his own departure, he wrote: “Twilight and evening bell, And after that the dark, And may there be no sadness or farewell When I embark.”

FOR ANGLO-SAXON UNION.

Australian Opinion Favors the United States in the War.

Australian papers favor a union of the Anglo-Saxon race throughout the world. Thus the Sydney Daily Telegraph says: “There is good ground for hope that the approaching war may prove an agency or that union of the Anglo-Saxon race throughout the whole world watch, with every passing year, seems less like a vision of political utopians and more like a practical necessity. It has long been recognized that if the millions of the United States could be brought to say yes or no in the large issues of international policy, with the millions of Great Britain and her colonies, the greatest conceivable guarantee of peace to the world would be assured. There is no doubt whatever as to the feeling of the self-governing British possessions on this point. If such an alliance between Great Britain and the United States could be cemented as would make Government of the latter nation one with that of the former in maintaining the equilibrium of power among nations, and giving direction to international Government, the advantages of it would be wide. With the United Kingdom and the United States back of Canada, Australia, South Africa and the smaller British possessions, and the British influence scattered throughout the world's countries concentrated upon any purpose of supreme moment, any combination directed against it would be impotent. Out of the coming war events may arise which will go far to bring the two great nations into union to a degree which would have seemed impossible but a few months ago, when President Cleveland's message was written. The interest of England is unquestionably with the United States, as against Spain.

“Australians are very anxious to join the United States army. Colonel Bell, the American Consul at Sydney, has had offers from hundreds of men wanting to go to the front. Two trained hospital nurses also offered to go to the seat of hostilities in Cuba or the Philippines.
