Senate Leader Says Election Is Necessary

OTTAWA (CP)—Senate government leader John T. Haig said Thursday no federal government can operate effectively without an over-all majority in the Commons.

He told the Senate during the throne speech debate that "if we are to have a government that can formulate strong and far-seeing policies in this country we must, inside of a year, have a general election."

In the Commons, the Progressive Conservative government has 111 supporters, the Liberal opposition 105, CCF 25 and Social Credit 19 with two independents, one independent-Liberal and two vacancies.

Senator Haig, minister without portfolio in the federal cabinet, said he has not special knowledge or information about the prospects of another general election.

MAJORITY NEEDED

"Certainly, I have no political interest in it, and neither have my fellow senators," he said. "But I am interested to this extent—that an over - all majority in the House of Commons is required to carry on effectively the government of this country."

He said he might be accused of making excuses to try to justify the present government making an appeal to the country. That was not his intention but he hoped the party that formed the government after the next election would have a clear majority in the Commons.

"... It will mean better government for Canadians the meeting of the problems we will undoubtedly face in the years to come.

"We in Canada need a stable government which can make agreements and long-term commitments. This can only be done by a government which is sure it has the backing of the majority in the House of Commons."

TIMELY NOTES ON FUR FARMING

Both the Great Lakes Mink Association and the United Mink Producers Association met in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, last week and both were told of a brighter outlook for good mink during 1957 and 1958 seasons by representatives of marketing groups. The reasons they gave were that mink production this year and next year will be lower than previous years, and smart breeders are concentrating on producing finer pelts.

Some disposition to discount this encouraging appraisal was expressed by members because of the recent heavy decline in the stock market. Some of them said that it would affect retail business in the Eastern United States. David Loffm: New York manager of Great Lakes Mink Association forecast a bright season for finer mink, and a better season for average type mink, and the chairman of the F.L.M.A. marketing board said that the great amount of half-bloods marketed last year hurt the price of mink, as a whole.

FEWER MINK

This year not as many half-bloods will be marketed. Production of all types of mink pelts will be down about 700,000 pelts from a year back Barry Cowgard, president of Hudson's Bay fur sales, New York, said that the market which exists today is a reverse of the market that existed a year ago. Manufacturers are making money, failures are almost non-existent.

At present there are only 24 Great Lakes mink pelts unsold. The only disturbing factor is the Wall Street decline which could hurt fur business if it continues.

He implored each member to improve quality and production of his mink, and he stated that fur breeders were only able to dispose of last year's crop because of a sharp assist from trimming houses on the one hand, and spli-skin manufacturers on the other. This was not done at a price that gives the rancher an economical return. He urged the rancher to get into the qualify field and produce more mink that can be used for fine fur garments

BETTER MUTATIONS

Last year's marketing of mutation pelts was summed up by Herbert Mezger, vice-president of New York Auction Company, New York, who concluded by asking ranchers to provide the auction houses with better pelts. Abe Pertmack, general-manager of New York Auction Company, Minneapolis, said that the fur rancher is in a better position than last year. Better conditions within the fur industry itself, he said give the rancher improved confidence to look for a better fur market.

Otto Grosse, president of U.M.P.A., who is well known in this province, said that although the stock market is dropping millions each month, there continues to be a steadily climbing demand for fine dark mink. He said the pelts are for "mink, mink, and mink again."

At the recent Neiman-Marcus Show in Dallas, Texas, he said he has been criticized for moves he made recently, but what he has done has been for the good of the mink industry. He told the members present that they did not realize the danger of foreign importations. The American public, he said, respects and trusts U.M.P.A.

PERFECT PELTS

The U.M.P.A. farmer, who sells damaged mink under the UMPA label is committing a crime. Mr. Grosse said every UMPA member has obligations to see that damaged pelts are never marketed under the UMPA label.

This is a partial list of the quantities that were offered at the Canadian Fur Auction Sales company (Quebec), Ltd., auction in Montreal on Thursday, October 24th. Muskrat — 40,000; ermine — 14,000; wild mink — 500; dark and mutation mink — 4,500; and silver fox, including platinum, pearl platinum, white mark and standard silver — 5,000.

Now we give our mink ranchers a picture of the prices realized by Great Lakes Mink Association pelts marketed during the 1956-57 season. The decline was 14 per cent from the previous season, and the pelts averaged $14.34 each during that season. The average was $16.75 per pelt the previous year. United Mink Producers Association members who received top prices for their bundles during the 1956 season were presented with plaques. Arthur McArthur of Jamesville, Wisconsin, took first prize in Male bundles. Mr. McArthur received $116.00 for a Male bundle during 1956. Winner of first prize for Female bundles was Jim Moore of Penhtigo, Wisconsin, with a $45.00 top. Northwood Fur Farms, Carey, Illinois, received $105.00.

RESEARCH

A total of $60,000 in research grants has been made to various colleges and universities in recent years by the National Chinchilla Breeders of America. The object of the research provided for by the grants is to provide the answers to questions on chinchilla diseases, care, nutrition, and reproduction.

One of the most encouraging factors for mink farming is the vogue for mink-trimmed garments, even dog collars are being trimmed with mink. In hats, a spiral in let-put mink and pastels is featured. In muffs, the barrel style in white ermine and white ,black-dyed and dark mink is popular. In sweaters, popular mink, homo mink, sapphire mink white ermine or white mink and ranch mink, In hats — white and black mink berets are standouts. And black fox is still tops for muffs.

Dates for Soudack Fur Auction Sales, Winnipeg, are December 6th and 16th — mink January 7th, February 4th, March 17th, May 1st — mink and general furs.

Swimming Pool Will Be Sub-Reactor

TORONTO (CP)—The University of Toronto, the Commonwealth's largest, plunged further into the atomic age Tuesday with announced plans to build a sub-critical atomic reactor on its mid-town Toronto campus.

The reactor will not be capable of initiating a chain reaction but "will be otherwise similar of operating reactors" and will be used "to educate increasing numbers of young Canadians for the atomic age," the university said.

Special electronic equipment will enable students to simulate control of a large-scale reactor. But the installation will not contain enough uranium to cause a chain reaction, and hence is called a sub-critical reactor.

The new installation will be operated by the faculty of applied science and engineering. The department of physics has already launched a concurrent program in nuclear physics.

It will be Canada's first sub-critical reactor for educational purposes. McMaster University already is building a "swimming pool" type reactor for research work on its Hamilton campus.

Canada's reactors at Chalk River, 20 miles northwest of Pembroke in eastern Ontario, are operated by the federal government and are capable of chain reaction.

The University of Toronto said its reactor will be of the natural uranium, heavy water type.

The reactor will cost $439,000 and will be built by 1958 by Canatom Limited, the Canadian subsidiary of General Dynamics Corporation.
