Your anxiety is for your delicate child; the child that in spite of all your careful over-watching, keeps thin and pale. Exercise seems to weaken her and food fails to nourish. That child needs Scott's Emulsion with the Hypophosphites—not as a medicine, but as a food containing all the elements of growth. It means rich blood, strong bones, healthy nerves, sound digestion. No child refuses Scott's Emulsion. It is pleasant and palatable.

MONEY TO LOAN.

THE ECHOING WHY

(Concluded)

"Seems to me I heard so, but I'm not sure. Anyway poor Jennie has been having hard lines."

"Burrows was ill nearly a year and couldn't work. I suppose he couldn't do much for her."

"I dare say he gives it all to the Kendrick."

"Oh, no; that was off long ago. Do you know the way he spoke a few minutes ago about Christmas? It seemed to me he was thinking of his wife."

"More likely of the new part," sniffed the heavy woman.

"First act!" shouted the stage manager and the soubrette made a dash for her entrance.

Things seemed bound to go crisscross in "The Great Gold Mine" company. That very day Paquita, "the child wonder," who played the infant role, was taken with measles, and a new child had to be speedily secured.

She was rather a pretty little thing, with large, blue eyes and curly, golden hair, but as she was not yet 4 years old the manager feared she was too young, but the woman who brought her assured him she was very clever and would soon learn the two or three lines she was to speak.

"Great Caesar! A new kid, too!" sighed the leading man. "She'll be afraid of me, and the audience will think I've kidnapped her instead of being her lawful parent. I must try to cultivate her."

"Come here, midget," he said kindly. "I'm not midget. I'm Little Pearl," answered the mite, with great dignity.

"That's a very nice name." And he put out his arms to her.

She hesitated. "I don't think I like you," she said doubtfully.

"Dear me! Why don't you like me?"

"You're too handsome."

There was a chorus of laughter at Burrows' expense.

"That's the first time my fatal beauty ever proved to be a drawback in the profession," laughed Burrows.

"My mamma said I was not to like handsome men," said the child gravely.

"Mamma has evidently had a history," added Burrows in an aside voice. "But," he went on, determined to conciliate the child, "I am your papa, you know. You must be good to me anyway."

"Oh, are you really my papa? Then mamma won't mind if I kiss you." And the tot suddenly flung her chubby arms around the leading man's neck and put her little cherry lips up to his.

The situation was, to say the least, embarrassing. Titters were heard in various directions, and a smothered guffaw exploded in the wings.

"Oh, I mean I am your papa in the play! We are just making believe," hastily corrected the actor.

"PAPA, WON'T YOU KISS MAMMA?"

The little one drew away from him, and the childish lips quivered.

"Oh, I thought you were my really, truly papa!" she said, with a strangely pathetic look in the big blue eyes. "D'dn't you ever see your papa?"

"No, never."

"Is he dead?"

"I d n't know. Mamma cried when I asked her."

"I hope he was good."

"Oh, he was! My mamma said so."

"Then he must be dead," said the leading man in a decided tone. "The good men are all dead. It always proves fatal. I'm quite bad, you know."

"I don't think you're bad," gravely shaking her head.

"Bless you! That's comforting—to have some one have faith in you. I mean I'm bad in the play, not always. You will like me, won't you?"

"Oh, yes, if mamma lets me."

A truce being thus arranged, the rehearsal proceeded. That night the leading man made a hit, and Little Pearl acquitted herself with credit. When she came to the line, "Papa, won't you kiss mamma?" she got a round of applause. But there was something wrong with Burrows. He stopped suddenly, as though he had seen a ghost in the wings, faltered in his speech and was only saved by the leading woman throwing him his line. In two minutes the curtain went down and the people had scattered to their rooms. But Burrows still held the child's hand. He led her to some one who was waiting for her. She was a pale, thin little woman in shabby clothes.

"Jennie," he cried, "are you ill?"

The woman became a shade paler and caught at the heavy set beside her.

"Come," she said to the child, "come, Edith."

"Edith! My God, my own child, and I didn't know it!"

He caught the little one to his heart, almost crushing her in his strong caress.

"Give her to me," said the woman, with a sort of fierceness. "It is time for her to go home."

"Won't you let me see her just a moment? Am I not her father?"

"Oh," cried the little one, gleefully, "are you really and truly my papa? Then why don't you kiss mamma, too?"

"I would," said Burrows very softly, "if she would let me. Tell her, Edith, I would like to very much, and I would like to go hime with her and stay with you and her and—"

"Well," broke in the child, "why don't you kiss her?"

The leading man still held the child tightly in his arms. He looked appealingly at the small woman, who had not changed her position.

"Jennie," he said, "it is Christmas eve, a time to forgive and forget. I want the old time back. For the child's sake, can you—"

Somehow he couldn't get any further, for Jennie was sobbing on his breast, and Edith was reiterating her request for him to kiss her, and he was obeying her commands quite to the letter.

The little child had led them. And that night the leading man had a Christmas tree of his own.

ARTIFICIAL INCUBATION.

It Was Known in Egypt Before the Christian Era.

The artificial incubation of eggs is not a modern invention. It was practised by the Chinese and the ancient Egyptians. Diodorus, who wrote 40 years B.C., tells us "that the Egyptians, with their own hands bring eggs to maturity, and the chickens thus produced are not inferior to those hatched in the ordinary manner." The practice has been carried on by the native Egyptians ever since, and the method still used has been employed from time immemorial. The eggs are placed on mats strewn with bran in a room about 11 feet square and four feet high. Over this is another room about nine feet high. In the upper room fires are made in troughs, and immediately below in corresponding lines in the lower room the eggs to be hatched are laid out. After ten days the eggs are removed to another room where there are no fires, but from which the air is excluded. Here they remain five days, after which they are laid down, each one apart from the others, and continually turned. This stage lasts about seven days, and at the end of that time the chicken may be expected to make its appearance.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON. 113 Anne St., Toronto

These Were Old Warriors.

Enrico Dandolo was elected Doge of Venice in 1193, being then 82 years old, and shortly afterwards defeated the Pisans in two naval battles. In 1202 and 1203 he subdued Trieste, Zara and Constantinople. In 1204, at the age of 94, he again, at the head of the Venetians and the French Crusaders, attacked and stormed Constantinople, himself leading the van, and planting the Venetian flag on the ramparts. On the establishment of the Latin empire of Constantinople, which immediately followed, he was offered the crown, but declined it. He died in the following year (1205). He is said by some historians to have been blind, but it seems probable that he was only partially so. Count Von Moltke was over 70 when he undertook command of the Prussian armies in the Franco-German war.

He Gives.

Jesus gives not because we can repay Him, but because we are utterly poor and weak and helpless. Hence, we read as the first of the beatitudes, "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of God" 'Their poverty is their crown; it gives them power; it enthrones them as princes in the realm of grace.

OWEN SOUND, Dec. 28, (Special)—The people of this town are talking again of another cure credited to Dodd's Kidney Pills. This is the case of Mr. W. Cruse, caretaker of town buildings, who, when seen had this to say of the matter:—

"For over two years I have been an intense sufferer from kidney disease with occasional acute attacks of inflammation of the bladder."

"Was under doctors' treatment and have been compelled to resort to instrumental relief many times.

"I have taken eighteen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am satisfied with results being perfectly relieved of all suffering."
