

USED IN HOLDUP

These items were found by police officers in vehicles left behind by thieves who escaped with at least $50,000 after looting a mail truck from the CNR station parking lot at Sherbrooke, Que., 85 miles east of Montreal. No other trace has been found of the robbers. (CP Wirephoto)

Founder of Press Service Dies In N.S. Nursing Home

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Charles F. Swick Crandall, founder of the British United Press news agency, died at a nursing home Thursday after being ill for several weeks. He was 87.

Death was attributed to a brain hemorrhage.

Mr. Crandall, a native of Saint John, N.B., founded BUIP in 1923 and operated it as a Canadian news agency for 18 years until it was taken over by United Press in 1941.

Mr. Crandall's newspaper career spanned 40 years. It began in Saint John in 1900, a year after he graduated from Acadia University here.

He joined the Saint John Sun as a reporter and rose successively to become city editor, editor and general manager. In 1909 he went to the Halifax Echo as editor.

In 1910 he became managing editor of the Montreal Herald, and in 1912 it was merged with the Montreal Star in 1912 in the same capacity. He became executive editor in 1915 and left in 1921 to start in partnership, the Vancouver World, a daily that lasted one year.

FORMED SYNDICATE

He began the work of organizing British United Press in Montreal and in 1923 it was launched under a working agreement with United Press, a United States news agency.

About the same time he was instrumental in forming the Dominion News Bureau, a Montreal feature syndicate.

Mr. Crandall was BUIP president and managing director until 1941 when control was transferred to the United Press. Although he remained president until 1948, he disposed of much of his interest in the agency two years earlier.

Mr. Crandall had played a part earlier in the founding of The Canadian Press, beginning with extensive missionary work

REMEMBRANCE DAY

NOVEMBER 11 1963

We bow in memory of those who fell
Upon the beaches and the burning sands,
And those who lie in slimy ocean wrecks
Or sleep in lonely graves in foreign lands.

They did not shrink with trivial excuse
Nor did they waver when the test arrived
They took the burden with the zeal of youth
And, going grimly into action, died

Who knows, among the legions that are gone
Unknown to fame among that gallant throng
Were men who might, had they but lived their span,
Have shown where our diplomacy is wrong.

The past is gone, the future lies ahead,
The errors of the past we must correct,
In apathy there lies prospective doom,
Accelerated by our own neglect.

So to the end we must not fear nor fail,
Our gratitude to them must never cease
May God be merciful to those who died
That we survivors might live on in peace.
