Meeting at Murray Harbor North

According to notice a large and intelligent meeting of packers and fishermen, and those interested in the lobster business was held in the hall at Murray Harbor North on the 12th January. Mr. Daniel McKee-man was appointed Chairman and the undersigned Secretary. In a few appropriate remarks the Chairman stated the object of the meeting, and called on any person present that wished to address the meeting to do so.

The Hon. A. C. Macdonald, being present, spoke at some length, advising moderation on the part of both packers and fishermen, and concluded by wishing to hear the fishermen's views on the subject.

After Mr. James Clow, M. P. P., gave expression to his views in a practical speech the following fishermen spoke, viz: Thomas Miller, Jeremiah Daly and Jonathan Lewellin, all concurring in the unjustness of those intended restrictions to be placed on the fisheries, and also gave Mr. Macdonald to understand that they a great number of whom are supporters of the Government—would withdraw their support from the present party in power if said restrictions should be put in force.

Mr. Peterson being called on spoke at some length about the importance of the lobster industry, and upholding the fishermen in their remarks.

The following resolution was proposed by Mr. Clow, M. P. P., seconded by Mr. Angus McEggeny:

Resolved—That it is the opinion of this meeting that the proposed new regulations as issued by the Department of Marine & Fisheries for the further protection of the Lobster Fishery, mean, if enforced, the utter destruction of the Lobster industry and the closing up of every factory on the Island.

Further Resolved—That it is our opinion that no restrictions are necessary for the protection of the industry beyond the enforcement of the close season.

Further Resolved—That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the meeting to be held at Charlottetown.

The following delegates were appointed to attend the meeting in Charlottetown, viz: James Clow, M. P. P., and Daniel McKee-man, Esq.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. McDonald, M. P. P., for attending the meeting, to which he suitably replied, and promised to use his influence with the Government, particularly Mr. Tupper, not to have said restrictions enforced.

NEIL McDONALD, Sec'y.

Torn to Pieces by a Pet.

JEALOUSY OF A MASTER'S BRIDE LEADS A YOUNG LION TO KILL HER.

A most peculiar instance of jealousy in an animal is reported from a ranch up in the range northwest of Silver City, N. M. A Mexican named Juan Lopez some years ago caught a young mountain lion and raised it as a pet. He had the animal completely under subjugation, and it was as docile with him as a house cat.

The lion is now about four years old and is full grown, but it has always been accustomed to sleep at the foot of the bed of its master and has followed him like a dog when he went about the place. He had it trained for hunting, and it was always with him except when he came to town. It had never shown any savage disposition when with other people and would allow visitors to fondle and pet it.

Lopez recently fell a victim to the charms of one of the señoritas of the vicinity and in course of time married her. The girl was brought home to the cabin of Lopez, and her first move was to insist that the lion should be made to sleep out of the house, as she was afraid of the big animal. Lopez assented to her wishes and built a house for his pet near the door of his cabin.

When he attempted to make the animal go in that night, the brute for the first time was disposed to resist against the wishes of its master, and the result was that it received a whipping. It went sullenly into the box, but all night long the Mexican and his bride could hear its low growls. Next morning the animal slunk into the house and curled up in a corner, repulsing the caresses of its master. It was sullen all day, but the bride noticed that it watched her constantly, and she became so nervous that she insisted that her husband should get rid of the big lion. He promised to do so as soon as possible. He told her he would take it to town in a few days and sell it. The second night it went to its hut outside with little opposition, and next morning Lopez started to town to find a purchaser for his pet. He left the animal at home and told his wife to pay no attention to it, but go about her work as if it was not in the house.

Lopez had no difficulty in finding a purchaser for his lion and about five o'clock in the evening started home pretty well intoxicated with mescal and elated at the fact that he was to get a hundred pesos for his pet which he had estimated to be worth only about twenty-five. He arrived home after dark and was surprised to see no light as he approached the house, as he supposed that his wife would be ready with supper for him that he watched the place but it was so dark that he could distinguish nothing, and as he groped about he stumbled over something on the floor which gave way to his pressure. Stooping down he discovered that the object was a woman's body and he felt that blood had been poured over his face.

He quickly struck a light and was horrified at the sight that met his gaze.

The young wife had been torn to pieces by the savage brute, which had evidently looked upon her as the cause of its disgrace. The struggle could not have been long, as the marks of the teeth showed that the lion had jumped upon her back and broken her neck at the first bite. It then had torn the victim to shreds, the limbs being severed from the body and the face covered with bleeding remains which had been dragged about and shaken as a cat treats a rat.

The animal after completing its work, had fled to the mountains and has not since been seen. Lopez hurried to the nearest neighbor and the terrible story soon spread.

"White Ribbon" Notes.

Its own defiance of God's law and the demoralization it has wrought in every community where it has been tolerated have written the doom of the liquor traffic, and whether it be in a day or a year or more, in God's own time its destruction is sure.—Josephine R. Nichols.

Josephine Elitzholz, M. D., of Hyderabad, India, writes of the inspiration that the Union Signal brings her in that far-off land. She says that the Mohammedan Begums (Princesses) who, as a rule, are much more orthodox than the men, have an idea that there is brandy in all English medicines, and will take no prescription from a physician except for powders or pills. Who can say that their caution is not commendable?

With the recurrence of a grippé comes the old prescription of whiskey. Dr. Geo. F. Arnold, General Grant's physician, on being asked if whiskey was a good preventative of the disease answered: "Whiskey is never good to ward off anything. Good food is the best means with which to ward off disease. To dose with whiskey is like adding shavings to the fire. There is no physical, mental or moral excuse for a man's drinking whiskey as a preventative of disease."

A Washington correspondent of the Advance writes: "The wife of a leading senator says: 'Never, since the days of Mrs. Hayes, has so little wine been taken at public official receptions as during the present administration. It is also true that very few official homes, during this administration, furnish wine; and even when it is furnished, the examples of the Harrisons, Wansankens, Millers, Proctors, Hensons, Hepburns, Dorchester, Foster, Morgans, and many others has a restraining influence. Scarcely any of the men selected by President Harrison as his advisers ever take wine. Blaine is now a total abstainer. President Harrison does not take wine at any of the receptions—even when only gentlemen are present, and Mrs. Harrison never, under any circumstances anywhere, takes wine.'

A philanthropic lady of the government of Tambov, Russia, who owns several villages, has caused all the liquor stores in her villages to be closed, and established in their stead tea houses, where peasants can get meat, rolls and all the tea they can drink for a mere nominal sum. On Sunday she and her husband spend the afternoon in these tea houses, reading useful books and extracts from newspapers to the guests. The peasants are greatly pleased with this innovation. The tea houses are patronized and drunkenness is almost unknown in those villages where they are established. As the scheme was a suggestion of the novelist Tolstoi, the church authorities at once established a supervision over them, with the special object of preventing the house-kept lady and her husband from reading Tolstoi's works, or any heretical books to the peasants on Sunday. But the philanthropic couple do not mind this, and continue their good work undisturbed.

Mr. Moody, at Campbellton, England, said the other day: "If there is anything in your business that is wrong, you must give it up. 'Oh, you might say, 'but that would ruin me financially.' No matter; better be ruined financially than to go to the bar of God a disobedient child. If men could distil whiskey for the glory of God, then let them go on distilling whiskey; let them send a thousand barrels of it to the heathen, and some for the missionaries, and then let them pray over the matter and see how they feel. They could sell whiskey to men who might drink themselves to death, making their wives widows and their children fatherless, but it won't do to turn round and say now: 'I will give this widow and these children some money,' and think that the transaction would square; nor could a man who ill-treated his wife and family when he was the worse of drink make up for it by treating them kindly when he is sober."

No thoughtful person believes that we have reached a settlement of the saloon question. In other countries as well as this the curse of the saloon is commanding the attention of the best men of all parties in State and Church. It is not the discussion of an abstract question of political science that interests them, but the actual existence of a fountain of crime and poverty in the heart of even the best communities, which grows worse as the years go on. In every country the political managers—the men who are in politics for the money in it, whose one aim it is to hold and control the offices—and the saloon keepers are fast friends. The political managers will do nothing to endanger the support of the liquor interests. They take their position not because they have any regard for the saloon keeper, or on account of a liking for intoxicating drinks, but because they do not believe there is any chance of party success unless they can command the patronage of the saloons. They are sure of the vote of the saloon and its influence; they have their price, and they are sure of them when the price is paid.—Central Adv.

ROME, Jan. 20.—Vatican officials declare the report that the Pope is suffering from an attack of influenza is unfounded and asserts that His Holiness is enjoying good health.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Hon. J. A. Chas. continues seriously ill, and is ordered to spend some weeks in Florida. Premier Abbott called upon the secretary of state this afternoon.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—G. O. Pelland, a young lawyer of this city, will offer a factious opposition to the re-election of Hon. J. A. Galignat in Lével, when the latter runs as Minister of Public Works.

Nothing more disgusts a party of fox-hunters than to have an old cow get ahead of them and go racing and snorting along, with her tail in the air and terror in her soul. It looks as though they were chasing the cow, and that's not an English custom.
