Bringing in the sheaves

"Bringing in the sheaves," and the use of combines, have been rapidly clearing our harvest fields during the week, so the picturesque appearance of abundant fields has nearly vanished. It is reported that Toronto Western Hospital has replaced the old three-year, unpaid apprenticeship with the new course which provides academic instruction in the first two years, for which fees are paid, and then an "intern" year allowed during which the nurses draw regular salaries. They also are allowed 4 weeks annual vacation and work week of 5 1-2 days, instead of 6. This program is supported by federal and provincial Government grants, and from charitable organizations.
