

Recumbent Gravestone In Old Cemetery At Stanhope

spouse of David Lawson, Esq., Oct. 1811, and their eldest son Stephen Boyver Lawson, who died Oct. 2, 1831, is one of the few granite memorials on the ground. The others are of sandstone, with names and dates undecipherable.

A Feature For Every Friday Among The Farmers Federation Of Agriculture News

It's Fair Time

Old Home Week provides an opportunity for a happy combination of education and relaxation. For those who like to take a chance and enjoy a break in the daily monotony, harness racing appears to satisfy a great number of people.

For those concerned with the fundamentals of agriculture and making a living from the soil this year's livestock exhibits are a fine example of the results of infinite patience and skill in breeding, feeding and showing. The showman of today is an artist who displays the best points of his animal and also contrives to conceal the weak ones.

The management of the Exhibition Association deserves a great deal of credit for their efforts in providing the best of facilities and in endeavouring to make their plant one of the best. The successful operation of such a Fair involves a tremendous amount of planning, organization, and hard work, all of which may not be apparent to the casual observer.

Dairy Booth
The milk bar operated by the Dairymen's Association and Federation of Agriculture certainly demonstrates that the public has a keen appreciation of wholesome food in general and milk in particular. On Wednesday the girls working in the booth served out 225 quarts of milk and nearly 2000 tasty cheese sandwiches. This milk bar is a happy addition to the splendid exhibit of handicrafts arranged by the Women's Institutes of the province.

The display in this building is one which our women may well be proud of and indicates that skill is certainly not lacking in work which requires infinite patience and a keen appreciation of perfection.

National Poultry Meeting
On August 2nd, representatives of the Poultry Industry met in Ottawa to discuss the possibility of establishing a sound system of marketing control on a National motor trip touring the province. They were guests of their aunt, Miss Mary Allison Doull, Cape Traverse, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Irman, Central Bedouque, and attended the races on Wednesday of Old Home Week in Charlottetown. Capt. Doull, who is now retired, was a deep sea captain in command of one of the Imperial Oil Company's ships and is able to relate many interesting events of his seafaring of 47 years. During that time he was only able to be home twice to celebrate Christmas. During World War II the oil tankers were a special target for the enemy submarines, and during an encounter with a German sub off the coast of Florida, he was successful in saving his ship, and was awarded a medal for his prowess.

Personals
Mrs. Harry Huber and her daughter Theresa, of Lynn, Mass., are visiting Mrs. Huber's mother's family at her old home in Riverdale.

Messrs. J. Edward Turner and Joseph I. Stewart, who were at the Exhibition and races Wednesday, returned to their homes in Hope River.

Dr. R. Gordon Simpson of Glace Bay spent a short holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simpson of Bay View.

Miss Vera O. Simpson left recently for Edmonton, Alberta, where she will begin her teaching duties in September.

Mrs. Walter Davy and son Philip have returned to Ottawa by plane after spending a pleasant visit with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forden Young of the city.

Dr. T. E. McLennan and Mrs. McLennan, accompanied by their daughter Sharon, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. D. MacInnis, have left for New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, to visit their daughter and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. MacLeod, en route to their home in Montreal the end of August.

basis for eggs in particular. It was evident that in the minds of the delegates that two main problems required attention. First, that in the interest of producers that egg prices would not fall to unprofitable levels which resulted in curtailed production and eventually were not in the best interest of the consumer.

And secondly, that scarcities through speculative factors should not be allowed to discourage consumption. There was general agreement on the necessity of a National Poultry Board which would have power to deal with and handle surpluses which would depress markets and discourage production. Before such a plan can be worked out, a National Board must have at its disposal sufficient funds to buy, hold, and dispose of surplus production.

It was further agreed that such a fund should properly be provided by a levy on eggs produced in Canada. Certain provinces contended that the Board should only accept responsibility for eggs that could not be sold in the domestic market and that the existing facilities in the trade should be interfered with as little as possible.

Other provinces felt that such a board should take possession of and control all storage eggs. Such a National Board to be successful will require at least the setting up of Boards in the five western provinces. The prairie provinces apparently felt that by working together even without a National Board they could effect a marked improvement in their marketing technique.

Hog Conference
The burning question discussed at the hog conference was the one of optional grading for hogs either on a live or rail basis. Western delegates were pronounced in their belief that optional live grading was necessary to provide a stronger competitive factor in the sale of hogs and to facilitate the movement of live hogs into the United States.

These delegates felt that compulsory rail grading on a National basis was necessary to market out to a few large packers and forcing out of business small abattoirs and butcher shops, which had a competitive value in the market.

It was finally agreed that live grading should be asked for at the main centers on hogs moving into the United States. The question of the one half per cent deducted by packers to cover condemnations were also thoroughly discussed and one large marketing organization was able to show that over the past ten years in handling their own condemnation fund at a quarter of one per cent that had been able to protect the farmer against both condemnations and losses in transit.

The question of red cellophane striped with white used in the packaging of bacon received the attention of the meeting and established the fact that both producer and consumer were agreed that such packaging material tended to disguise the real nature of the contents and produced dissatisfaction on the part of the housewife.

It was therefore, recommended that in the future only clear white cellophane should be used.

Federal officials reported on progress being made in revamping rail grade standards for hogs and stated that action would be taken when producers agreed upon new grades.

There were delegates who questioned the necessity of 19 hog grades in view of the fact that most of the product was now being sold in the domestic market and that the consumer was not likely to be so finally discriminating in his taste.

C. F. A. Semi-Annual Meeting
Space does not permit a complete report of the proceedings of this meeting at MacDonald College, possibly the two most important questions were that of farm labor and immigration policies and the fluctuations in price and supply of western feed grain.

The east too strong objections not to the price of grain but, to the rapid changes and to the uncertainty of supply. The west maintained that so long as grain was

It's A Baffler

SEUL, Korea, Aug. 16—(CP)—What do the Koreans really think of the 38th Parallel, or a military line not far from it, as the limit to United Nations military operations?

It's a baffler.

More than anywhere in the west, it is important here not only to see and to ask questions, but to ask lots of them, and the same many questions of lots of people.

They would seem to add up to a confused picture of national aspirations, no coherent voice on their realization and meanwhile compliance with government-ordered demonstrations without realization of their impact abroad.

Of late there have been several demonstrations in Seoul, where as many as 25,000 citizens in columns of three, have wound their way from a central park, past the capital buildings and by the foreign consulates' billets.

They carry banners, placards, streamers strung between two poles and spanning the street, and they proclaim in English and Korean characters: "Advance Beyond the 38th", "Unity Korea", "The Yalu is Our Border", "And, provokingly, "Good Luck Admiral Joy".

Strange contradiction. In other words: "We want the war to go on," and "may your efforts to stop it now succeed."

It is a silent filing-past. No shouts or cheers. Not even unified chatter among them. An interminable straggle while column, the only sound the sandals' shuffle on the asphalt.

Only occasionally is there a listless chorus as a section repeats slogans rattled off a chart by a cheer-leader marching alongside.

Then the wooden masks again. It's all suspicious.

Government Orders

Every demonstration or parade is ordered out by the government. Personal opinions matter. The government lays on a demonstration for three o'clock this afternoon and the streets detailed fall in as ordered.

"Citizens dare not refuse," said one parader who was interviewed. "They might once, or even twice, but a third time would be enough to be denounced 'anti-government' and therefore 'pro-Communist'."

It is discovered that the South Koreans have had quite enough of war. The feeling also is shared by army officers and other ranks, who said: "We want the war to stop. Train us and we'll hold them wherever the frontier is."

On one thing all Koreans are agreed—and that applies to north as well as south—they want their country reunited.

A synthesis of the interviews would be:

"Koreans would be happy to see hostilities end with adequate safeguards for South Korea's territorial integrity and provision for political talks later on unification."

It would seem safe to say that any "Yalu or bust" proclivities shown by the government are not popularly supported—despite Seoul's public protestations to the contrary.
