Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Just about everyone has been educated to the principle that one of the great crimes a defender can commit is to lose a trick by giving the declarer a ruff and discard.

As a corollary to this principle, the declarer attempts whenever possible to bring about the position where the defense cannot avoid making a play which permits the ruff and discard.

South applied the very best technique to the play of today's hand to give himself the maximum chance to win the slam contract. After winning the ace of diamonds he ruffed dummy's jack so as to clear both hands of diamonds.

He then played a trump to the king and another to his ace, learning that West had a sure trump trick. Declarer then cashed his three high spades, clearing both hands of that suit. At this point he put West in the lead with a trump.

Rather than give declarer a ruff and discard by a diamond return, West returned the jack of clubs. South won the club in dummy, led the nine of clubs, finessed, and made the slam.

All of which was a fine peice of work by declarer, but he should have been defeated. West allowed the bugaboo of the ruff-discard set-up to dominate his thinking. When West came into the lead with the trump he should have returned a diamond, intentionally permitting the ruff and slough.

West has enough information about South's hand to know the ruff-discard can do declarer no good. South has shown up with precisely three spades, five hearts, one diamond, and hence four clubs.

If the four clubs include the K-Q the hand is over; South cannot be beaten. The supposition is therefore made that declarer is lacking one of these honors, that is, that East has at least as good as three to the queen.

But if this is the case East has a natural club trick coming. A ruff-slough will not jeopardize East's club trick. Playing the jack of clubs, though, might.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BEDTIME STORIES

Flitter's Winter Home

Home is where and what you make it.
Happiness should ne'er forsake it.
— Old Mother Nature.

"Do you really mean that you sleep up here in the winter the way Johnny Chuck and Nimbleheels the Jumping Mouse sleep?" Peter asked Flitter the Bat.

"I don't know how they sleep, because I've never seen them asleep," said Flitter. "But I can tell you how I sleep. I sleep so soundly that I don't even know what the weather is. I don't know if it is cold. I really don't know a thing about winter. I would be asleep now if it were not so warm."

"But where do you sleep?" asked Peter.

"But where do you sleep?" asked Peter. "Johnny Chuck, Nimbleheels and Jimmy Skunk sleep deep down in the ground. Do you sleep deep down in the ground?"

There was a funny sound then. It was a very funny sound. It was that squeaky voice chuckling. It was the funniest little chuckle you can imagine. "No", said Flitter, "I don't sleep down in the ground. Yet, in a way, I suppose I do."

That was too much for Peter. "Either you do or you don't," said he rather sharply.

That funny little squeaky chuckle was repeated. "You say either I do or I don't. I say, I do and I don't," squeaked Flitter.

Peter looked at him queerly. He suspected that Flitter was teasing him, was making fun of him. "Just what do you mean?" he demanded.

"Just where is Johnny Chuck's hole in the ground? asked Flitter.

"It's up in the Old Pasture," said Peter. "Sometimes it has been down on the Green Meadows."

"I thought so," squeaked Flitter. "Well, I don't keep in that kind of ground. The ground I sleep in isn't sand or earth of any kind."

"Then what is it?" cried Peter.

"Rock," replied the squeaky voice.

"But rock isn't ground," cried Peter.

"If it isn't ground, what is it?" squeaked Flitter, and again he chuckled that funny little chuckle.

Peter couldn't answer. That was a question that was too much for him. He put a question of his own. "How can you sleep in a rock?" he demanded.

"There are sometimes big holes in rock. They are called caves. Don't you know that, Peter Rabbit?" squeaked Flitter.

"I hadn't thought of that," said Peter. "Of course, I have been in holes in the rock in the Old Pasture, but I wouldn't want to try to sleep in one all winter."

"Neither would I," said Flitter. "I would be afraid they would fill up with snow and I'd freeze to death."

"Then where do you sleep?" demanded Peter.

"I'm sharing the home of an old acquaintance," replied Flitter.

This was too much for Peter Rabbit. "I don't believe a word you are saying," said he.

Workshop Patterns

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

These figures are ideal for use during the Christmas holiday festivities as lawn decorations, or in any large room where groups gather. The large figures on pattern 374 are 17-inches and 21-inches high. The pattern is taped onto the material and traced around the edges for sawing out; as well as for painting the folds of the garments and other details of the garments and other details. The Three Kings, the shelter and traditional animals in the positions shown in the lower left are all pattern 375. These patterns are 35 cents each and will be mailed immediately upon receipt or order. For first class mail add 2 cents each and 5 cents each for air mail which saves several days.

Chief Scout Massey Presents Awards For Youthful Pluck

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Massey, Chief Scout of Canada, today presented 27 honors and awards — two of them posthumous—at a colorful investiture at Government House.

Two physically handicapped boys—Peter Drummond Fraser, 12, of New Glasgow, N.S., and Ronald Keith Human, 16, of Morden, Man.—received the Cornwell Scout Badge, highest award of the Canadian Boy Scouts Association.

They received the award for "remarkable Scout-like determination and fortitude" in carrying out scouting duties and passing Scout tests successfully and cheerfully.

The Fraser boy, whose left leg is amputated below the knee, suffers from a rare disease which causes haemorrhages in various parts of his body. Young Human was born with a muscular defect which prevents him from developing properly.

The badge is named for Scout Jack Cornwell, a ship's boy who remained at his post despite wounds in the 1916 Battle of Jutland after the other members of a 10-man gun crew were killed or wounded. Cornwell won the Victoria Cross posthumously.

RECEIVE SON'S AWARD

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ruddick of Cobourg, Ont., received the Bronze Cross for gallantry with special heroism, awarded posthumously to their sons Paul, 9, and Ronald, 11, who died July 8, 1955, while trying to save a six-year-old boy from drowning at the mouth of Factory Creek in Cobourg.

The Bronze Cross also was presented to Richard Charles Evoy, 13, of Ottawa, who on June 18, 1955, saved an Ottawa woman from drowning in the Ottawa River.

Other awards and their recipients include:

Silver Cross for Gallantry with Considerable Risk
Ronald Gordon, 14, St. Hubert, Que.; William Docherty, 16, St. Hubert, Que.

Medal for Meritorious Conduct
Claude Laniel, 12, Valleyfield, Que.

Silver Wolf for Services of Exceptional Character
L. W. Anderson, Outremont, Que.

Silver Acorn for Distinguished Service
Edward T. Buchanan, Shawinigan Falls, Que.; A. Stuart Knight, Strathmore, Que.; M. T. Bancroft, Sillery, Que.; H. Raymond Mountney, Montreal.
