Diefenbaker Suggests Broadcast Of Debates

OTTAWA (CP)—Serious consideration should be given to the broadcasting of parliamentary debates, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Tuesday. He told a Canadian Club luncheon the people are not getting the story of Parliament under the present no-broadcast system. Broadcasting would allow the people to "see Parliament in operation". Mr. Diefenbaker noted that when he was prime minister he had the parliamentary opening televised. "We should expand that," he said. It is understood that Mr. Diefenbaker had both radio and television coverage in mind. He also said he is "becoming concerned" that "two or three groups may find themselves in control of radio and television."

"That's a dangerous course for democracy," he did not elaborate on this point. MUST IMPROVE IMAGE Mr. Diefenbaker said Parliament's image must be improved.

REFERS TO CRITICISM There has been widespread criticism of Parliament, he said. "Some say we talk too much," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "That's what Parliament is for, Parliament is not an administrative body."

The parliamentary responsibility is "that of speaker out." Above everything else, Parliament must talk.

Parliament, he said, is not a business. The only way it can be effective is to discuss and bring forward the best legislation possible. Parliamentary discussion forms public opinion which can change the mind of the government.

Parliament could not survive if public apathy and scorn continued to be heaped upon it. He feared criticism might destroy public confidence in Parliament.

OBITUARY ALBERT E. HUESTIS Inserted by the family.

He was born in Albany, the son of the late Jesse Huestis and Minnie Leard and moved to Summerside at a very early age.

He served with the federal department of agriculture as a fruit and vegetable inspector until his retirement two years ago.

He was a member of Trinity United Church, where he served as a choir member and was also pianist for the AOTS Mens Club.

Present Education Ferment Hits At Textbook Publishing

TORONTO (CP)—The present ferment in education is having a dramatic impact on the textbook publishing industry.

Just as no one is quite sure what changes are coming next in education, so no one can be certain what is going to happen in school books.

In fact, says William Darnell, vice-president of publishing for McGraw-Hill Co. of Canada Ltd., one of the leaders in the field, trying to pick winning authors and titles is more exciting than horse racing.

An estimated 12,500,000 textbooks, worth more than $35,000,000, were sold in Canada last year. During the next few years, publishing officials say, the markets will more than double.

The potential increase doesn't mean automatic gains for the 16 major firms engaged in turning out textbooks, Mr. Darnell says.

Ten or 20 years ago, only a few titles were in general use in each subject across the country. As a result, a publisher could count on long—and highly profitable—printing runs of 100,000 copies or more.

Now, Mr. Darnell says, the emphasis on tailoring courses to meet students' needs means that 20 or more titles in one subject are common.

He says most publishers count on representatives they keep in the field to try to spot areas where new textbooks are needed, from the primary to post-graduate levels.

If a company feels a new book is required, it approaches an expert in the field to write it. It then turns out a short run, often only 4,000 books or about half what is needed to break even on average. Finally it tries to sell it.

Since a book takes an average of 18 months to produce, anything could have happened in the interval—another publisher could have come up with one, the school system could have changed so the book is no longer needed or the lack could have been covered by existing texts.

MAY MAKE PROFIT If all goes well, however, and a market is found, more books are run off the presses to give the company a profitable margin.

To try to meet the growing need, McGraw-Hill this week officially opens a new headquarters for its Canadian operations, started in 1947. The

$2,200,000 building in suburban Scarborough contains a huge warehouse capable of storing 3,000,000 books. The company, a wholly owned subsidiary of McGraw-Hill Book Co. of New York, last year opened branches in Edmonton and Montreal. Mr. Darnell says Canadian textbooks are beginning to find a potentially important export market.

Some already are in use in the United States—and there have been informal approaches about selling others in Africa, including French-language editions in former French colonies in that continent.

flash reports giving detailed analysis of the 10 most active stocks in the industrial, mined and oil groups. These will be hourly showing price, volume and net price change. It will carry stocks showing the largest percentage change in price although they are not on the most active list.

Transactions were fed to them on high-speed tapes. At times this task could be difficult, especially during heavy volume. One girl said that during the excitement generated by Texas Gulf and Sulphur Co.'s major strike in the Timmins area in 1964 "the tape was running so fast we were up to our ankles in it."

One day during the excitement 28,000,000 shares were traded, the heaviest daily turnover on any North American exchange.

SHIFT TO OTHER JOBS Now that the computer can handle the printing of prices and volumes, most of the girls have taken on other jobs, or will do so soon.

Three were kept by the exchange and trained to work in other departments. Two have taken positions with stock brokers and a few will be kept on at records to post hourly prices from the computer printouts.

The advantage of the computer is speed and accuracy. It can do the girls' task plus other additional recording work in 20 times less time than it would take the girls to do it.

Records is only a small part of the function the computer performs at the exchange. It is being used to handle work in almost every department.

The printouts show opening, high, low and closing prices, along with the volume at any given time. They take about four minutes to publish and are available at the opening and hourly until the close.

The computer will also print

ABANDONED SHIP TOWED TO TORONTO

Tug captain G.G. Harris looks over the Greek freighter Protostatis which was towed to Toronto over the weekend. The 7,260-ton freighter ran aground near Kingston Nov. 16 and her owner later abandoned the ship and her cargo. A Kingston group claimed the vessel for salvage but a Toronto company bought the rights and towed her to Toronto. The vessel will either be repaired or sold for scrap. (CP Wirephoto)
