U.S. Federal Officer Tells Of Hostility In Ole Miss.

By SAUL PETT
OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—A United States federal officer sent five white shirts to the laundry and they came back blue.
Another man sent a suit out turned full of itching powder.
It was like living in enemy territory," said a deputy United States marshal, "like living among people who had just lost their way to the moon."

There was little communication and even less fraternization between Mississippians and the marshals, the avowedly federal police force which got its start in Ole Miss after the bloody riot last Sept. 30 and kept him there.
HOSTILITY FOLLOWS
Heavy air ofullen hostility pervaded the marshals almost everywhere they went. Even when they were off duty and lunching in the university cafeteria, there were students who vacated neighboring tables and left a no-man's-land around the federal officers.

Some deals have built in traps to catch the unwary. The difficulty in these hands is not that the problem which exists is hard to solve, but rather that there is a lack of awareness that there is any problem at all. Take a deal like this one, for example, where South is declarer at three notrump and West
