

Calls Report Exaggerated

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Fulton Thursday described as apparently "greatly exaggerated" a report that American guards without warrants searched all private houses along the route taken by then U.S. President Truman in an Ottawa visit after the Second World War.

He said there is "no likelihood of any such event taking place in connection with... any future visit by any head of state who visits Canada."

Mr. Fulton was replying to H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) who referred to the "very disturbing tale" as reported in The Printed Word, a periodical published by the public relations firm of Johnston, Everson and Charlesworth Limited.

PM Says Experts Ponder Montreal Crude Oil Line

OTTAWA (CP)—The question of a crude oil pipeline to Montreal is receiving attention from federal experts, Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Wednesday.

Mr. Diefenbaker made his brief reference to the matter in reply to a question from CCF House Leader Hazen Argue.

Mr. Argue asked whether "any consideration has recently been given by the government to the advantages which might accrue from the pipelining or the shipment of crude to the Montreal area."

Mr. Diefenbaker replied: "That question is always receiving attention and consideration as between the experts in various departments of the government and the provincial representatives."

nadian market may be made available for Canadian production of oil.

"I know of no such projected meeting," replied Mr. Diefenbaker.

There have been no indications as yet that the government is convinced prairie oil piped to Montreal could compete economically with the crude oil that now is brought there from foreign sources by ocean tanker.

100 LOST AT PARADE MONTREAL (CP)—Police said about 100 children lost during the four-hour St. Jean Baptiste parade Tuesday were all returned safely to their parents within a few hours.

Canadian Trio Discusses Trade Relations With US

BOSTON (CP)—Three prominent Canadians talked Thursday about their country's marketing problems with particular attention to Canada—United States trade relations.

The occasion for plain talking was a panel discussion at the 40th national conference of the American Marketing Association, held at the Harvard school of business administration.

The panel members were Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, former minister of trade and commerce and a director of a large number of Canadian corporations; W. O. Twiss, executive vice-president, Imperial Oil Ltd., Toronto; and T. G. McCormack, president of Dominion Stores, Ltd., Toronto.

Panel chairman J. D. Dodge, of the Aluminum Co., of Canada, Ltd., said he hoped the panel's views would help promote a better understanding of Canadian business in the United States.

Mr. Howe said there has been increasing discussion of areas of disagreement between Canada and the U.S. and "this growing friction is causing some concern in business circles of both countries."

He felt Canadian-American relationships "are expressed too often in terms of differences between our governments in matters of trade" and not enough emphasis is placed upon "the long historic intimacy of our two peoples."

On world trade Mr. Howe said groups of countries affected by the so-called dollar gap were moving toward development of common markets, with an objective of free trade between the member countries of each group and a common tariff against goods from outside.

"The trade offensive launched by Communist countries is 'another threat to free world trade,'" Mr. Howe said there is a probability that the North American objective of establishing world trade on a multilateral basis is likely to be frustrated by new bilateral and barter pacts.

AVOID BARRIERS "To me, this prospect emphasizes the importance of avoiding new barriers to trade between Canada and the United States, as well as to the desirability of lowering those barriers wherever the economics of the two countries will permit."

Mr. Twiss spoke particularly of trade in petroleum—"a comparatively freely traded commodity, one which... is not unduly inhibited by customs duties."

"Recently, however, the United States imposed a so-called voluntary system of import quotas. It may be that these quotas are going to be made mandatory and more intense, thus breaking the long tradition of comparative free trade."

Senator F. Elsie Inman (L-Prince Edward Island) said in the Senate throne speech debate that there should at least be a chair car and adequate first-class cars.

"Last winter I travelled from Emerald Junction to Summerside in a car that must have been the first one ever manufactured," the 66-year-old senator said.

Mr. McCormack, speaking about food marketing, said there is not the same sharp difference between the supermarket and the chain store in Canada as there is in the United States.

Canada watched the development of the supermarket in the U.S. and Canadian chains "began to move into the supermarket field themselves before any sizable number of independent supers became established."

They are not prepared to renounce their countries of origin, he said, and the oath of allegiance to Canada "is taken too lightly."

He cited incidents that occurred at the recent arrival in Vancouver of a giant Russian plane. "Russian-Canadians met this plane, clad in national costumes, and bowed to the pilot. These Canadians were expressing loyalty to Russia in no uncertain terms."

Their oath of allegiance is "worthless," the judge declared. "Only a few months ago" some Dutch Canadians did the same thing in "flocking" to honor Prince Bernhard.

Describes CNR Accommodation Utter Disgrace

OTTAWA (CP)—CNR accommodation from Sackville, N.B., to Charlottetown and Summerside, P.E.I., was described as "an utter disgrace to any transportation system."

Senator F. Elsie Inman (L-Prince Edward Island) said in the Senate throne speech debate that there should at least be a chair car and adequate first-class cars.

"Last winter I travelled from Emerald Junction to Summerside in a car that must have been the first one ever manufactured," the 66-year-old senator said.

WILL KNOW DECISION "When a decision is arrived at, the House, of course, will be made aware of it."

Earlier, Mr. Argue asked whether a meeting between the government and all-Canadian oil companies was planned to see whether "a larger part of the Canadian market may be made available for Canadian production of oil."

"I know of no such projected meeting," replied Mr. Diefenbaker.

There have been no indications as yet that the government is convinced prairie oil piped to Montreal could compete economically with the crude oil that now is brought there from foreign sources by ocean tanker.

The number of lost tots was considered normal for the size of the crowd, estimated at 500,000.

Mr. Diefenbaker replied: "That question is always receiving attention and consideration as between the experts in various departments of the government and the provincial representatives."

In conversation with Mr. Gregor, he states, strange as it might seem, he is using the same Purina Formula on his Pheasant chicks that has been so successful in raising his Turkeys and that out of a total of 320 chicks he has lost only two birds.—We think Mr. Poultryman that is a pretty hard feed formula record to beat. Boston & Maine Business Down PORTLAND, Me. (CP)—The Boston and Maine Railroad said Thursday it carried fewer passengers in 1957 than in any time in the last 30 years.

Walter J. Nolan, assistant to the vice-president for accounting and finance, told the Maine Public Utilities Commission that annual net operating deficits were $12,000,000 to $15,000,000.

The railway is seeking to discontinue two Portland-Boston trains, including the Gull which handles passengers to St. John, N.B., leaving Boston at 7:30 p.m.

my Cleaners NOTEBOOK

LINENS' THAT AREN'T Remember that old riddle most of us laughed at when we were kids—"When is a door not a door?" (Answer: "When it's ajar.")

Well, here's a twist on that old gag: When is a linen not a linen?

But before you start thinking up clever answers, let me warn you that the right answer isn't the slightest bit funny. In fact it can be downright tragic.

The answer: "When it's an imitation line—made partly or wholly of rayon, regenerated rayon, or silk."

And that's exactly when some cheaper, so-called "linens" are made of these days. It's quite true that chemical science has done wonders to provide us with a lot of new, inexpensive fabrics. But sometimes I think the people in the clothing industry take advantage of science, especially when they produce imitation fabrics which will not stand up to the same care and cleaning that you would give to the real thing.

Take the case of the rayon "linens" for instance. Unless you use low ironing temperatures (those recommended for rayon instead of for linens) . . . pffftttt. No more fabric! And by the same token you have to take care not to spill any alcohol, nail polish or other solvent on such a fabric.

The silk "linen", too, can be just as tricky. It's usually made from short fibres that have been rejected when the silk was combed during manufacturing.

We're aware of such problems down at our shop, of course, so we never treat a linen like a linen until we know it's a linen for sure. And I suggest that you follow the same policy at home, or as they used to say on the old radio quiz shows—You'll be SORRRREEEEEE!
