Some Cold War Headaches Seen Moving To Red Side

By ALAN WALKER

PARIS (CP)—United States and Canadian delegates told NATO members that some headaches of the cold war are moving to Russia, opening up chances for the West to seize an advantage.

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk told a NATO ministerial meeting here the Soviet setback in Cuba and increasing problems within the Communist bloc give the West an opportunity to take the initiative in the East-West power struggle.

Eternal Affairs Minister Green of Canada backed Rusk. "This is a time when the Soviet Union is re-assessing its policies as a result of its forced withdrawal from Cuba," Green said. "This is a comforting situation."

The Kremlin, Green said, is having trouble, referring to the Soviet Union's agricultural and industrial problems and its ideological differences with Communist China. He felt it handed the West an oportunity to "take the initiative" but added that NATO seemed to be over-emphasizing military planning.

WANTS TALKS RESUMED

Green recommended intensive development of political and diplomatic NATO action, for instance toward a fast resumption of talks on Berlin.

Mentioning the Cuba situation, Green said the U.S. action in quarantining Cuba was "timely and of a decisive nature and notable for its calculated moderation." He warned, however, that it did not follow from this that Russia would act in a similar fashion if the West brought sharp pressure to bear on Berlin.

Other foreign ministers followed along on Green's theme. They included Britain's foreign secretary, the Earl of Home, and France's Maurice Couve de Murville.

Rusk assured the other NATO members the United States is not negotiating with the Russians on any other subject than Cuba. This was a reference to the numerous Soviet-American contacts since the Cuban crisis first broke, and to some European fears that Moscow and Washington might reach a deal over Europe's head, particularly on the Berlin situation.

On disarmament, Green suggested a scientific commission work on an adequate method of detecting atomic tests.

He also noted that delegates were unanimous in selecting Ottawa as the site of the spring NATO council meeting.

Opening lead—two of spades.

A reader sends this hand and acknowledges he made a mistake in the play. He wonders how many others would have fallen into the same trap.

South became declarer at three notrump and West (not reader) led the two of spades. East took the queen with the ace, and, in accordance with convention, returned the five, his original fourth best spade.

Declarer played the seven and West won the trick with the eight. West cashed the king, felling the jack, and then took the ten, but that was the end of the defense and South made three notrump.

Obviously, East - West could have done better, since they could have taken five spade tricks instead of four if the suit had not gotten blocked. If West had won the spade at trick two with the ten instead of the eight, East would have been able to overtake the eight later on to defeat the contract a trick.

West's mistake was a natural one, since most players tend to win tricks as cheaply as possible, and probably would have been made by many players.

The error would not have been made, however, if West had given more consideration to the defense of the hand as a whole. He should have realized, as soon as dummy came down, that there was no hope of defeating the contract unless his side could run five spade tricks at once.

Dummy had eight solid tricks in sight and it was practically certain that declarer had the ace of clubs for a ninth trick. South could scarcely have bid one notrump, lacking the ace of clubs.

This point of view—that the cause was lost unless five spade tricks could be taken at once—should have dominated the situation. Upon East's return of the spade five, West should automatically have credited East with five spades. Once his thoughts were channeled properly, winning the seven with the ten would have been a reflex action to cover the possibility of the suit being blocked.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X B
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
