Haslam Blasts Youth For Police Abuse

Obviously angry at the police report on the remarks to police by Terrence Steele, Magistrate A. J. Haslam, QC, said in City Police Court yesterday "the police are here for my protection and yours and are entitled to the respect due them."

"They should not be subjected to vile language while performing their duty. I warn you not to come back to this court, and to show respect for the police of this city."

The youth was charged with disorderly conduct by the police and the magistrate told him to consider Steele's age and the fact that he was still attending high school when he passed sentence. Steele was given a one-year suspended sentence.

Heath William Bowley, Parkdale, appeared on a charge of driving while impaired and on a second charge of driving while his license was suspended. He was remanded to December 18 on both counts. Two other men were remanded to December 23 on charges of being drunk and inebriated.

One Of Centre's Best Concerts Provided By Halifax Symphony

The following was written especially for The Guardian by the director of music for P.E.I.

By CHRISTOPHER GLEDHILL
Last evening the Halifax Symphony Orchestra presented one of the finest concerts to come our way for some time.

The choice of the program was excellent in view of the size of the orchestra, and was well calculated to bring out its best qualities.

John Fenwick, the new conductor, must be credited with producing a noticeable improvement, particularly in the strings. The precision, with one or two minor exceptions, was admirable. The wind playing was also of the highest quality almost throughout.

The Rossini overture was given a sparkling, and was well calculated to bring out its best qualities. The Rossini overture was given a sparkling, and was well calculated to bring out its best qualities.

HALIFAX (CP) — The weather office says an area of high pressure stretching in an arc without sounding in the remote degree patrolling or high-falutin'. We hope that they will be enabled to come again at some slightly less hectic period in the school year.

After the intermission the well-known Fantasia on Green-doves by Vaughan Williams was played with a litting rhythm. Mr. Fenwick, conducting from the piano, almost (but not quite) persuaded us that the piano was an acceptable substitute for the harp. The middle section, based on that wonderful Norfolk folk song "Lovely Joan", was a delight to hear.

The biggest work and the most exciting test of the evening came at the end of the program in the shape of Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony. The brilliance and precision of the band showed up to great advantage. I liked Mr. Fenwick's straightforward reading. Here and there he made a few played a little more nuance, for example in the third movement, which was a little lacking in that indefinable ingredient known as charm.

I think the orchestra at that point was beginning to show signs of nervousness. However they pulled themselves together magnificently for the exciting finale of the evening. The woodwinds chattered excitedly, the brass added touches of brilliant color, while the strings wove their way feverishly through the lace-like figuration of this difficult score, where the slightest slipperiness shows up.

STRINGS PRAISED
The string playing in the development section of this movement was of a high order. I praise the strings because it is here that the improvement is most noticeable.

The audience was enchanted and asked for more; they were given an encore of a spirited performance of Brahms' Fifth Hungarian Rhapsody (the well-known one), and went their ways in excellent humor.

During the afternoon the orchestra gave a concert for schools. Unfortunately the dual claims of examinations and Christmas concerts made sad inroads on what would otherwise have doubtless been a sell-out crowd. It is a pity, for those who could not attend
