Why do we hear and see so much about "Paines' Celery Compound?" Because it is claimed to have a certain amount of celery in its composition, and why are we blowing so much about celery? Lost His Birthmark.

An amusing incident took place at the Grand Central station a few weeks ago. A portly man with clothes of foreign cut, outlandish baggage and a decided German brogue bought a ticket for a western point and then bought a sleeping berth and waited for his train to be announced. As soon as it was called he got into line, occupied much space with all his bags and bundles and made people in front and behind him uncomfortable. He had no sooner reached the platform than he dropped his baggage and freight and pushed his way back into the waiting room, ran up to the police officer and said breathlessly: "Say, I lost my birthmark." "Your birthmark? Where was it?" "Here in my pocket in." "In your pocket? That's a nice place to have one," said the officer, wishing to humor a crazy man. "How did it look?" "Red—fool—like all birthmark. I can without it not in the sleep wagon go," and he rushed to the ticket window, where they knew that the German meant berth check when he said birthmark, and the matter was settled to his satisfaction. The crowds had gone through the door, and it was nearly train time when he came bounding back and up to the ticket window, where, with profuse apologies, he told the clerk that he had found his "birthmark."

Too Much Realism.

Mme. de Navarre has recorded in "A Few Memories" the greatest lesson she ever received against too much realism. In a certain drama the heroine, under great excitement, suddenly stops to gain composure as she hears the approaching carriages of the guests. "Hark!" she says. "I hear the wheels of their carriages." We obtained the effects of approaching wheels, but try as we would, the stamping of the horses' feet upon the gravel before Clarisse's door we could not manage. At last a brilliant idea struck me, which the stage manager promptly indorsed. It was that we should have in a donkey from Covent Garden to trot up and down behind the scenes on the gravel especially laid for him. We were decidedly nervous on the first appearance of our four footed friend, whose role was to counterfeit the high stepping horses of the brilliant French court. When his cue was given, there was only an ominous silence. I repeated the word in a louder voice, when such a braying and scuffling were heard as sent the audience into roars of laughter. Although it was one of the most serious situations of the play, I could not help joining in their mirth until the tears rolled down my cheeks.
