He was one of a family of 12 of which one brother, Robert in Florida, and one sister, Elizabeth of Malden, Mass., survive. Injured Man Sees Sister First Time in 26 Years

James C. Brown 47 of Troy, New York, saw his sister Mrs. Elsie F. Monaghan of Hazelbrook, Prince Edward Island for the first time in twenty-six years last week and the occasion marked a silver lining in the clouds for the man who is confined to the Samaritan Hospital in Troy New York with a severe back injury and fractures of both legs suffered while at work Thursday May 18th. Mr. Brown was hurt in an accident while he was operating an elevator while at work for Morris Rome and San Troy junk dealers. An official at that company said Mr. Brown was working alone and was found after the accident when fellow workers were attracted to the scene by the man's moaning. The details of the accident were not determined as no one was at the scene and Mr. Brown has not been well enough to describe the mishap. Mrs. Monaghan returned to her home the last of the week. She was called to New York by Mrs. Mary Deyo, of Troy, New York where Mr. Brown has been a roomer for some time. The man's condition was serious at that time and he was believed near death, but has improved slightly since. Mrs. Monaghan stayed at Mrs. Deyo's home during her visit there.

The Old Cornwall Cheese Factory

F. H. MacArthur

The Cornwall cheese and butter factory was built about 1882 on a site of land leased from the estate of Mr. G. Mayhew, and the lease was to cover a period of 99 years.

According to a letter handed me by Mrs. B. Warren, North River, the property was leased by a Mr. Newbery, a merchant of Charlottetown who later removed to New York State.

Upon the removal from this Province of Mr. Newbery the property was acquired by the late Angus MacDonald of North River and R. B. Stewart, father of Mr. Alan Stewart M.L.A. and Mr. George Toombs of Charlottetown. Shares were sold in the newly organized company which took the name of the Cornwall Creamery Co. The first cheese maker under the new set-up was Mr. Newbery with W. W. Muir of Ingersoll, Ont., as managing director.

With the passing of the years, a number of men filled the role of cheese makers in this, one of the oldest factories in the Province, C. J. Brown, J. W. Hazeltine, Richard Hood, John Ellsworth to name but a few. By the way, Mr. Ellsworth (still living), was the last of the clan. With the opening of more modern plants in the city and country Cornwall factory faded from the picture and for many years stood as a familiar landmark or until it was turned into a skating rink. When the factory was enjoying its palmy days buyers came direct from the Old Country to purchase their supply of cheese, among these was the Hudson Bros. Dr. James W. Robertson, for many years Commissioner of Agriculture and Dairying for the Dominion, visited the island in the interests of dairying and as a result of his efforts a number of factories for the manufacture of butter and cheese were opened in the Province, namely, Vernon River, North Wiltshire, Crapaud, etc.

To meet the need for good cheese makers some men had to be brought here from Ontario. For instance, F. J. Dillon was sent to New Perth. Then there was the Burge Bros. George and Joe and a Mr. A. Biffin, Biffin and Spillett remained on the island and their descendants now operate a progressive business in the city.

Thus it may be seen from reading this brief sketch that Cornwall factory was in operation before Dr. Robertson came to this Province. The old factory operated continuously from about 1882 until its doors closed in 1916.

At one time a stock company made up of local farmers took over and managed the plant.

Island Odds And Ends

The Fortune River is possibly our most beautiful and best known salt water fishing stream. It can be very rewarding, and tantalizingly disappointing. For the past few days, it has been in a mean mood though the tides and weather have been ideal. On Saturday evening, a dead low tide slowly turned and started inland under a darkened sky. It was the kind of evening frequented of Fortune pray for and seldom get. But only the smallest of fish rose to the fly, and there was some sharp-shooting anglers whipping the waters for a couple of hours. Among them was Mr. Sterling Blanchard who has summered at Fortune for many years and knows the ways of trout thereabouts better perhaps than anyone in the Province. He would possibly share this distinction with Mr. Leigh Dingwell who has also lived his summers at this beauty spot since his youth.

There was a plausible explanation for the scarcity of trout in the river on Saturday. The lobster factory at the wharf where the trout enter the river is discharging lobster waste into the river every day and many large trout were seen gobbling up this by-product of canning operations. It is unlikely that many fish will move up-river while they can feed on a lobster diet.

Other disappointed fishermen at Fortune on Saturday included Borden Myers, Charlottetown contractor, Frank Carbonnel, Wilfred Doucette, Jack Cople, former potato inspector, Jim Robison, once Charlottetown's liquor vendor, and Stanley Bryenton, auditor for the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

People who come in contact with visitors to Charlottetown hear many nice things about the C. N. R. Hotel. "The Charlottetown" is being lauded for its accommodations, its cleanliness, the excellency of its table, and not least, be it noted, for the courtesy and efficiency of its staff.

Government officials who have been in our city recently, Mr. Lin Snodgrass of Ottawa, and Miss Margery Dunsforth of Moncton are only two of many visitors who paid tribute to the hotel's meals and general high standards. Both are well acquainted with hotel life in the Maritimes and Upper Canada.

Coupled with the approving words of most visitors, there usually is a reference to the hotel manager, Mr. Gordon Foster, and the friendly way he looks after the comfort of his guests.

A few short years ago a Charlottetown girl in her early teens lost both legs below the knee while crossing a railroad track. It was a terrific blow to the youngster, of a kind which might well have ended all hope of a normal happy future. Today this girl, now nineteen, is cashier of the well-known restaurant "The Barn" in Central Royalty. Never since the days of her convalescence has she permitted her handicapped condition to daunt her spirit, nor to diminish an unusually keen sense of humor.

Today, Marie Gallant is holding down a job competently after passing high in her class in 2nd year Commerce at Prince of Wales College. She dances occasionally and takes part in most activities of girls of her age. An unassuming courage, and a sunny disposition has carried her through the difficult years of readjustment, and she displays the poise and confidence of much older girls.

Her father is the well-known blacksmith, Mr. Odie Gallant, known to horse race owners throughout the Island, for his work with horses.

MacNevin's shoe repair store, operated for many years on Great George Street, is moving a few doors south to the new McConnel building. First opened by the late Neil MacNevin, the store now carries on business by the brothers, Harry and Eddie MacNevin, both very competent shoe-men. Their establishment has been one of Great George Street's for many years and the brothers have many friends not only in Charlottetown but throughout the countryside. Their reliability and good workmanship have earned them a solid reputation. It will please many people that though obliged to move to make way for new construction, they will remain very much in business and only a few yards away from the old stand.

Only man in the world who has sailed around the North American continent is a Canadian Mountie. Sergt. Frederick Sleigh Farrar, He gazed upon polar bears and beautiful scenery from the deck of the same vessel, the R. C. M. P. supply ship St. Roch, shown exploring the northwest passage. The small vessel arrived in Halifax via the Panama canal, to be the first in history to sail around North America. The other 14 members of the 105-foot vessel's crew made trip only one way. The Sergt. Farrar, native of Liverpool, Eng., and who now lives in Ottawa, holds his title undisputed. The mountie said he found the adventures of the Arctic much more exciting than the pleasures of a tropical cruise.
