

5 Million Reserve Army Planned

U.S. Unveils New Manpower Plans

By C. YATES MCDANIEL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The defence department Friday unveiled its military manpower program, keyed to letting 100,000 youngsters under 19 volunteer each year for six months of active training to be followed by up to 9 1-2 years of reserve duty. While maintaining reserve training, they would not be subject to the draft.

The plan, to be submitted to the new Congress in January, aims at providing a 5,000,000-man reserve by 1958. This would include 3,000,000 in organized, trained forces, subject to first call in event of a general mobilization, and 2,000,000 in a non-organized, non-paid reserve pool. The present reserve is 3,000,000.

Under the plan:

1. The draft would continue as at present.
2. All of the six-month trainees would serve their reserve duty in the national guard, army or marine corps units.
3. The navy and air force would rely on other programs for their reserves.

At present, about 850,000 young men reach draft age each year. The draft currently is taking 20,000 a month—a total of 240,000 a year, for a two-year period. In addition, the navy and air force maintain their strength through voluntary enlistments.

With the program in operation, a young man reaching age 17 would have these choices:

1. He could wait for possible drafting.
2. He could volunteer for three years' service in the army or the marine corps or for a four-year enlistment in the navy or air force.
3. He could enter a reserve unit directly on the understanding that before reaching 19 he would be called to active duty for at least 24 months.
4. He could, under the new program, volunteer for the six months of training and sign up for a term of military obligation lasting for 10 years (six months training plus 9 1-2 years in the reserves) and except in time of war or national emergency would not be on active duty as a member of the regular forces.

Flight Deck Of Forrestal Widened

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Navy said Thursday the flight deck of the super-carrier Forrestal is being widened by moving the "island" superstructure. The changes will accommodate new and bigger types of aircraft which the navy recently decided to build.

A spokesman said the shifting of the island from its present position to a point 20 feet nearer the starboard side was not a major change involving reconstruction. Preliminary estimates are that it will cost $300,000 to $400,000, he said.
